University Senate Clears Faculty Senate, Council

A proposal to create a University Senate composed of 75 faculty, 25 student and eight ex officio administrative representatives was approved by both the Faculty Senate and the Central Council last week.

If the proposal is to become reality it must now gain the approval of the University Faculty Committee, the whole of the University of Missouri President John C. Weaver and the Board of Curators.

The Council will meet Wednesday, February 25, and in accordance with Faculty By-Laws, the University Senate proposal will be read. At a second all-faculty meeting, which Chancellor Glenn Witteried, head of the faculty committee, has called to vote on the proposal, a simple majority is required for passage. If the plan is passed, an editing committee will be appointed to amend the Faculty By-Laws appropriate for the transition to the student-faculty University Senate. The amended By-laws must then be approved by President Weaver and the Curators.

The Faculty Senate supported the motion, in the form of an amended motion, Thursday, February 12. The original motion by Dr. Artar Shaffer, chairman of an ad hoc student-faculty committee charged with studying means of increasing student representation in University governance, recommended admitting 60 faculty and 20 students on a University Senate, where the numbers to 75 faculty and 25 students was passed.

The Central Council voted unanimously to adopt the University Senate plan at its Sunday, February 15 meeting. The motion, offered by Council president Sam Bonnaire, stated that, "...the Central Council endorses the action of the Faculty Senate in recommending that a University Senate of 25 students and 75 faculty members be formed.

It further resolved that the Faculty Senate make every effort to implement such a plan, and to (Continued on Page 2)

Student Representation: Romantic Vision or Ploy?

by Doug Sutton, Current Staff Reporter was former Chancellor James L. Bugg's proposal last March that students select their representatives on the Senate a "romantic vision" or just a plot to make his outgoing administration look good to the students?

According to Dr. Arthur Shaffer, chairman of the ad hoc committee which studied the plans for student representation, Chancellor Bugg was not "serious about it, I think his record proves that he was a man who was very hostile to the idea of a freely-elected government, as we know by student government."

Shaffer told the "...that Bugg was involved in "romanticism" with the faculty last year, and that he was able to make his outgoing administration look good to the students.

Bugg, who left UMSL last May to assume the presidency of Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Virginia, told the "...that Bugg was involved in "romanticism" with the faculty last year, and that he was able to make his outgoing administration look good to the students.

James Bugg: Romantic Vision? said he was convinced that when "...the Senate was created here (UMSL) and really became the governing body of the institution, that the only way to bring the students into the participation was not only through committees on which they have membership now, but by bringing them into the Senate itself." Whatever the motivations for Bugg's recommendations, the Faculty Senate last week approved a resolution to transform the Faculty Senate into a University Senate comprised of 75 faculty, 25 students, and 8 ex-officio administrator members.

This came to an end the issue of student representation in UMSL government, which began when Bugg brought up the matter in an (Continued on Page 3)
Group Ready To Help

Drug Users On A Bad Trip

A local organization has been started to help persons under the influence of drugs down on a bad trip and to provide information on the effects of different drugs.

A spokesman for the Arid Rescue Squad said that the group is interested in helping people, not in speaking out in favor of or against drugs.

He said that information will be provided to all persons desiring to know the effects of a drug. The Squad, consisting of volunteers from medical and non-medical professions, keeps informed on the kinds of drugs being used locally. Telling how to come down on a bad trip, Emergency services in person or by telephone are available to persons directly or through friends. The organization has two phones, 652-9274 and 652-2874, with a Squad member near the phone on an almost 24 hour basis.

The non-profit organization charges nothing for its services.

IUCF Notes

A series of lectures and discussions on the Intervarsity Christian Fellowship's Doctrinal Statement of Faith have been scheduled for the meetings in the next month.

Bible studies have been scheduled Wednesday mornings at 7 a.m. in room 206, Administration building, and on Monday afternoons at 2:30 in the ecumenical building directly across from campus. All interested persons are welcome to attend.

ICVF is now seeking a faculty sponsor. Any interested parties should leave notice in the club's mailbox, room 117, Administration building.

The meeting also served as an introduction to Martin Lake, the new black counselor on campus.

The Manifesto called for the creation of a faculty-student government and the numbers of faculty and students to comprise that government. This vagueness was intended, Shafter told the Senate.

"We did not want to spell out every detail that would be included if this proposal were adopted," he said. Another member of the ad hoc committee on student representation, Dr. Joseph McKenna (Economics) said, "Our intention is to get a discussion of the principles involved."

Faculty By-laws require that the details of implementing the University Senate proposal will be the responsibility of an editing committee appointed by the University Faculty. These details include devising a method of selecting or electing student representatives, determining the basis for both student and faculty representation, and amending the pertinent By-laws.

The Curators failed to approve the calendar recommended by the UMC faculty because it preserves the current schedule. Arguing that all four campuses should have similar calendars to facilitate intra-university transfers, Judge Robert Brady said, "Why don't we change our whole approach and make the Columbia campus adopt the calendar of the rest of the University?"

representation was a good idea, although students; 2) election of some students to the Faculty Senate generally agreed. The committee acted to change the composition of Senate committees to reflect the student membership in the Senate.

The Senate did not receive Bugg's outline. At the meeting, the faculty labeled Bugg's proposals for a month while endorsing the feasibility of student representation in the Senate.

Shaffer stated that the Chancellor's plan was "the way Bugg conducted himself...that business of just ramrodding something through. Because I know many people are just as upset as you are about it...and you were very much in favor of the idea of students being represented in the Senate. They felt that Bugg had conducted himself improperly." He added that the Senate was more than willing to take up the matter again.

By the time of Bugg's departure, sentiment among faculty members had begun to crystallize on the issue of student representation. The current involvement of the Faculty Senate was: 1) use money and power for Christ's work, not as aids to our total commitment to Jesus Christ; 2) exercise leadership in supporting Jesuit endeavors; 3) select fellow-Jesuits to unify diverse activities; 4) live in community in order to grow deeper in faith and understanding of the Gospel; 5) use the Jesuit presence on campus to witness to the world. The committee sought faculty support in making a representation scheme February 12.

A large number of faculty members made statements in support of student representation. The final presentation scheme February 12.

Because we are a team of men serving Christ in the world, in the complex society, Jesuits have chosen various direct and indirect means of service. Some of our current involvements are:

- Aerospace, Meteorology, Physiology, Psychology, Social Work, Sociology
- Speech and Theater

We are part of a college faculty, educators, missionaries, pastors, researchers, social workers, spiritual counselors and writers. Jesuits can use almost any skill you may have.

We have been in action for four hundred and thirty years—ever since an ex-Spanish soldier named Ignatius Loyola and nine of his friends began the Society of Jesus in 1540. Today, we are 34,000, in almost every nation in the world—8,000 American Jesuits, working in many countries. Now, as then, our purpose is to live our lives for Jesus Christ in a unique community of men for service to people—anywhere, and job—in and through the Catholic Church.

Jesuits have been asked to provide leadership service to people in need, both in the Church and in the world. The reflection is the Jesuits, we publish America magazine. Jesuits are organizing Catholic radio and TV communications Latin America and Asia. We operate hundreds of high schools, colleges and universities. We man the Cambridge Massachusett Center for Social Research. We have Jesuit poets, painters, novelists, sculptors, and musicians. Others are concerned with business ethics (everything from the corner store to international banks and corporations). We are helping the Church find ways to mobilize its economic and institutional power for alleviating poverty, solving racial and social problems.

These are a few of our activities. As we become the "men of the century," we must be able to serve all the needs of our fellowmen. We have a great responsibility to see that Jesus Christ is alive in our own time, to see that the life and spirit of Jesus Christ remain alive.

4) live in community in order to grow deeper in prayer life and do more effective work as individuals in community, than as individuals alone.

Within the Jesuit vocation, some men choose the priesthood, while others do not—all are Jesuits in the fullest sense.

MINIMUM QUALIFICATIONS: a basic desire to serve Christ men—age 18-50 single or widower without dependents Roman Catholic, at least three years average intelligence confidence in yourself that you can do good work with long term dedication willingness to attain a Bachelor's Degree and probably a Master's Degree in your chosen work, ability to live in a community of men--you can live the Jesuit life for two years before deciding whether or not you wish to become a Jesuit.

NDC Convention in Chicago Stresses Grassroots Politics

John Oleski, president of the Students for Political Action, Judy Daygut, a teaching assistant, and Jim Butler, undergraduate, represented UMSL at the First National Conference of the New Democratic Coalition held in Chicago on February 13-15. The three acted both as members of the Conference's Student Caucus and as voting delegates from Missouri.

The conference was opened Friday, February 13, with a speech by Iowa Senator Harold Hughes, who nominated Eugene McCarthy for President at the 1968 Democratic National Convention and who has himself been mentioned as a "dark horse" for the 1972 Democratic nomination. Hughes spoke of the program of political repression apparently being carried on by the Nixon administration in such cases as the Chicago Conspiracy trial, the Black Panther raids, and the move by Attorney-General John Mitchell to subpoena film and notes belonging to the news media.

Highlight of the convention's scheduled events was the Saturday afternoon address by New York Congressman Allard Lowenstein, originator of the "Dung Johnson" movement in 1968 and a founder of the NDC. Emphasizing that the issues of liberal Democrats, such as Vietnam, poverty, and an overall reordering of national priorities, have been usurped by the Nixon administration, Lowenstein called for continued political effort and public education as the best means for recalling liberals and others from the "fog that is affecting the nation in solving its problems."

Coincidence of the NDC Conference with the ending of the Chicago Conspiracy trial provided opportunity for a focus on the problem of Constitutional rights, Mrs. David Dellinger, whose husband is one of the "Conspiracy Seven," was a featured speaker at the Conference's Saturday night gala; and the unexpected appearance immediately after Lowenstein's speech of Conspiracy Defense Attorney William Kunstler, who has been sentenced to 48 months in jail for contempt of court, was impetus for a demonstration march by NDC members the following day in support of the Conspiracy Seven.

A liaison committee between the NDC and the conspiracy organization was also established.

Resolutions were adopted by the Student Caucus pertaining this problem and to the need for financial assistance for students and other poor people to attend such meetings as the NDC National Conference.

The conference closed with a business meeting Sunday, February 15, at which St. Louisan Marvin Madeson was elected National Chairman. Madeson is Chairman of the Missouri NDC and a member of the Missouri McGovern Commission for Democratic Party Reform. Other business conducted Sunday included adoption of a National NDC Statement of Purpose and provision for a National Steering Committee, on which students and other minority groups will receive proportionate representation.

The New Democratic Coalition originated in August, 1968 after the Democratic Party's National Convention in Chicago, initiated by liberal Democrats (McCarty, Kennedy supporters), the original purpose of the NDC was reform of the Democratic Party. Since its founding, the organization has extended its activities to include political action, such as election campaigns and the 18-year-old vote drive, as well as direct action—participation in rent strikes, Moratorium activities, and the grape boycott. The guiding principle of the NDC is grassroots, "participatory democracy," reflected by the NDC's loose, local-oriented structure. On the UMSL campus, the NDC works through the Students for Political Action, which is currently concentrating on the 18-year-old vote campaign. For more information about NDC projects, contact John Oleski in room 117 of the Administration Building or Judy Day in room 436 of Boston Hall.

Symington Calls for End to Pollution, Raps Agnew

Congressman James Symington called for a non-partisan effort to preserve the ecological balance in the United States in a Feb. 13 speech. Symington (Dem., Second District) was the first in a series of speakers in the Century III program. This program is sponsored by the UMSL Alliance for Peace in conjunction with the Student Activities Planning Committee.

While noting that several of President Nixon’s environmental control proposals were originally advanced by Democrats, Symington stated that the credit for improving the environment is secondary to the improvement itself. “People being educated in engineering and science should learn the secondary, social effects of every action they will take,” he said.

Symington also attacked Vice-President Agnew’s Feb. 10 speech at a Republican Lincoln Day dinner. “Lincoln never said ‘whole damn zoo of people’,” Symington stated in reference to Agnew’s criticism of youthful dissenters. He added that Agnew’s “beer hall rhetoric” will “fortify hostilities in people that ought to be broken down.”

Symington also stated that the Nixon Administration is creating tension between “one man who says everything is all right and another man who says to hate one another.”

McCarthy Cites Imbalance
In U.S. Policies, Programs

There is an imbalance between philosophy, policy, and program in the priorities of the United States, Senator Eugene McCarthy (Dem.), Minneapolis, told an audience in Francis Field House at Washington University February 13.

Speaking during the third day of the Intrafraternity Council’s symposium on politics in transition, McCarthy cited civil rights, poverty, the military, and foreign policy as the four areas which demonstrated the greatest imbalance.

“In some programs we have more philosophy and less policy; in others we have more policy and less philosophy; and in other cases we have correct policy, but not enough program,” he said.

The Minnesota Senator called for a reassessment of the philosophy behind many of the goals of the United States. Stating that “in a particular way, the academic community must bear some of the responsibility” for the reevaluation.

“In foreign affairs, we have policy and programs based on a philosophy which we have rejected,” he said. “No one today believes in containment in Asia, yet we are still following it.”

McCarthy called the continuation in outdated beliefs “very strange and unreasonable.”

In a question and answer period after the speech, McCarthy rejected the notion that America’s foreign policy since World War II has been imperialistic. Instead, the policy of containing Communism, authored by the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, has been the primary concern of the U.S. foreign policy, he said.

McCarthy said that he opposed the appointment of G. Harold Carswell to the United States Supreme Court. He called President Richard M. Nixon’s aim in “balancing” the Court “revolutionary.”

“The outstanding fathers were not concerned about a balance of power in the Supreme Court. The idea was to keep all the brightest men, and presumably they would agree on most of the cases before them,” he said.

“I guess that a balanced court would hand down some good judgments here and some bad judgments there,” he added, smiling.

Report on Miss UMSL Inquiry Due Soon

The final report on the Student Court’s findings and recommendations in its inquiry into charges of racial bias in the Miss UMSL contest should be submitted to Dean of Student Affairs David Ganz within the next two weeks according to Chief Justice Steve Heist.

Heist said that the report, originally scheduled to be completed in late January, had been delayed by difficulties in arranging mutually convenient meeting times for both justices and witnesses.

Now that the taped hearings are finished, Heist said that the Court is busy drawing up the report. Some 10 to 15 witnesses testified in the closed sessions.

The Court’s investigation began last December at the request of Ganz after charges of a planned discrimination against black candidates in the Miss UMSL contest were made.

The findings will be of an advisory nature, final action on the matter being determined by Ganz.
Down to Earth Benefits of Space Program

Over the past couple of decades, the liberals in this country have found anathemas in ready abundance whenever they've needed something to blame the troubles of the times upon.

In the Fifties, they had Joe McCarthy to show them how relatively good they were. In the Sixties, the targets were more abundant. The war in Vietnam, ROTC on campus, the "military-industrial complex," big business, Godwater, Agnew, and in general, anybody to the right of Jacob Javits were vigorously eschewed.

The feats of Apollo 11 and 12 have brought a new target into view, one which will undoubtedly be a favorite in the 1970's: the space program. "We should spend our money on earthy problems rather than space technology," is a line we will hear with depressing regularity. But if one will ignore the liberal fallacies for a moment (for all time would be even better) and take another look at the space program, one will see that the space program's technological spin-off has very extensive earthly applications.

That the aerospace industry has grown by leaps and bounds over the past ten years is obvious to everyone. What is not so obvious to most of us is that the aerospace industry has grown more rapidly than even they themselves expected.

In order to keep pace with this expansion, the firms contracted by NASA have had to develop highly effective methods of training people for complex jobs in a relatively short period of time. The expertise gained from developing these new educational methods is immediately applicable to all sorts of earth-bound problems. For one thing, the chance to learn a hard-core unemployed will learn a well-paying, technical skill is improved a hundred-fold.

In the field of medicine, monitoring and measuring devices developed by the space industry are providing doctors with information previously unattainable. Nurses are now able to care for twenty-five patients at one time because of these devices. In fact, the medical spin-off has been so impressive that NASA now has space projects aiding research institutes and universities on the possibilities.

For all you ecology buffs out there, the space program has something for you, too. In the area of waste disposal, the aerospace people are developing a completely new filter technology that promises great things for pollution control here on earth. These new filters separate waste into its reusable elements and dispose of the residue without reliance on the conventional sewer systems that contribute so much to the pollution of our environment.

I recently saw a news program on television where Representative Jim Synington was discussing the possibility of a pollution free automobile with engineers at the McDonnell-Douglas plant here in St. Louis. This car would run on fuel cells, which, incidentally, were also developed for the space program. These are only a few examples of what we might expect from the spin of plenty of space technology.

It's about time liberals entered the 20th Century, testing the discriminating rigidity of the draft. In most cases, the individual rights of the professionals have been upheld, sharply rebuffing the arguments of the late President the director's job, as three persons have already declined the position. The obvious solution would be to do away with the entire Selective Service System instead of "re-forming" it with a lottery. However, Mr. Nixon need not hurry to announce a new appointment.

If, like all good bureaucrats, the system can function without a leader.

Literary Separatism

Dear Editor:

I want to correct the erroneous assertions in the LaBrier letter of February 12, 1970. First, the letter states that Unrle Tom's Cabin is "Great" and as "black work." I did not, second and far more important, the writer alleges that the exclusion of African American literature 270 is the result of my effort to separate white writers from the black and to deny the latter their rightful place in American letters. This is false.

A little over three years ago, when I first discussed the possibility of a pollution free automobile with the then chairman of the English Department, so American literature course offered at this University was opened to him or my knowledge single work by a black author. If, for whatever reason, black authors were excluded from traditional studies in American literature--as was and sometimes still is the case--then obviously this country, American literature surveys (sophomore, junior or senior level) are integrated. Furthermore, such courses alongside courses in black literature taught separately--not for the sake of separatism but to allow time for the in-depth examination of authors, their themes and techniques.

In precisely the same spirit, we offer a course in Romantic French:

poetry—not to “segregate” these poets from the rest of the 19th century, but rather to allow adequate time and opportunity for the close examination of a group of poets whom we would otherwise have to consider second-rate. I believe this is a classic example of the insidiousness of higher learning? I believe that if such an idea were to sprout on the campus of Columbia, it would be totally excluded from the study of American Literature.

Keep Standards High

Dear Editor:

I read with interest and admiration Chancellor Driscoll’s look at our “hallowed” university which appeared in the Digest. As a student who attended the evening college in 1963, I’ve watched this university grow from make-shift classes in the old Administration Building to the modern new structures now dotting the campus. That growth has been amazing.

It is in the best interest of all students that Chancellor Driscoll stressed the importance of not “lowering” the school’s standards for the purpose of providing a college education for the “disadvantaged” student. I don’t think that even they would sincerely welcome the idea. This would certainly be a mistake because a student wants the best education possible from his university. However, I also agree that these students wishing to attend should be found, encouraged, and motivated to become competent citizens of UMSL.

Debaters Make Clean Sweep

The UMSL debaters achieved a 9-0 record at the Gateway Invitational Tournament, Feb. 13-14, at St. Louis University. Debaters Mike Beatty and R. B. Felber defeated Washington University, Iowa State (they were the only team to beat ISU), Wheaton College, Winona College, Princeton, and Northwestern College in the elimination rounds. They dowed Wheaton, Vanderbilt and Cee in the final round.

The superior award and first-place trophy they won represented the sixteenth and seventeenth awards the team has won this year.

They now have a cumulative record this year of 62-43, with over 50% of their performances considered "winnable.

They will travel to DePaul University this weekend for their next tournament. Also, they have earned invitations to prestigious tournaments next year at the University of Indiana and Vanderbilt.

Southern Comfort

For Spring Sports

UMSL's spring schedule will get off to a swinging start when the baseball and golf teams travel south to prepare themselves for expanded schedules.

The baseball Rivermen under the able leadership of UMSL's own Ed Copeland will make stops in Memphis, Little Rock and Fayetteville before starting their St. Louis schedule. They open the season March 27 by playing three games in the C.B.C. classic in Memphis.

The Rivermen will face Bellarmine, Western Illinois and host Christian Brothers. They play a double header at Southwestern of Memphis March 28, two at Little Rock March 30, a twinbill at Memphis State March 31 and two at Central Methodist April 4 before returning to beautiful Forestwood Park to host St. Louis April 7.

In order to prepare his team for their southern ordeal, Coach Copeland, already acknowledged as the best baseball coach in UMSL history, has called a meeting for Wednesday February 25 in room 220 of the Administration Building at 4:00 p.m. Anyone interested in trying out for the team should attend.

Larry Berres' golf team will spend a week in Cape Coral, Florida taking part in the Gulf American Classic from March 30-April 4. Following that, the Rivermen golfers will meet SIU-Edwardsville April 7 before hosting Illinois College and Culver-Stockton at Normandie Golf Club April 8.

Berres has also called a meeting for next week to be held next Tuesday, February 24, at 4:00 p.m. in the conference room of the blue metal office building at the back of campus.

with 0:00 showing on the clock sent the teams to their dressing rooms at halftime with the Rivermen ahead, 41-35.

Coach Smith's lads came on strong as the second half began with Denny Robb sweeping the boards and Mark Bernsen's fine floor leadership, streaked to a thirteen point lead, 54-41, with

What is it like to be 6'4" tall and play center in college basketball against opponents like 6-7 Robert Waszycki of SIU, 6-6 Jim Schafer of Rockhurst and 6-11 Steve Schmitt of USA? "I prefer playing against big men," says UMSL's 6-4 center Chuck Henson. "They're slower and usually weak on defense. Also, playing a man-to-man defense they don't come out to get me and I guess they forget about me."

So far this season, tall opposing centers have "forgotten" about Henson enough to allow him to come up with a game high 25 points and 12 rebounds against South Alabama and a college career high 37 points against Rockhurst College last Saturday.

Chuck hasn't confined his scoring to games against tall opponents. He is currently averaging 15.1 points per game and 7.6 rebounds per game. In each department, he has been UMSL's leading scorer in six games and has hit double figures in scoring in 13 of UMSL's 19 games, with six of these being 20 point efforts. Such heroics have earned for Chuck the third "Riverman of the Week" selection this week and second in a row, making him the first UMSLman to be so honored in both categories.

Chuck was born in California and moved to Piedmont, Missouri at age four. He attended Clearwater High School in Piedmont, where he averaged 24 points per game his junior year and 21 his senior year. He hit a high of 51 points during a game in his senior year at Clearwater.

Following graduation from high school, Chuck attended Mineral Area Junior College in Flat River where he averaged 10 points per game both seasons. While at Mineral Area, Chuck met and married the former Ardith Jean Province. He and Ardith are now the proud parents of two year old Shawsa Kay who "reads" through the Rivermen game program at each home game looking for pictures of her daddy.

Chuck enrolled at UMSL in September, 1968 and contributed much to UMSL's District champion team last year. Playing both at forward and center, Henson averaged 7.7 points per game while doing a fine job defensively. He entered the third playoff game with Drury at the start of the second half and hit three quick baskets to give UMSL needed momentum. He rates the district title and national tournament participation as his top basketball thrill.

Ragged Victory

1441 remaining in the contest, Berens finished second in the UML scoring with seventeen points. Chuck Henson had twenty, but Mark's control of the UML offense and his seven assists were big factors in the Riverman victory. Mark's running mate at guard, Joe Laukemper, contributed another five assists as the two totaled twelve in the game, one more than SU-El's entire team.

The loss at semester of 67'-center Ron Crites definitely hurt the Cougars. Due to dead-linelines, the scores of both games were unavailable.

Friday night, UMSL will face a strong Concordia team in an 8:00 game at Concordia. The Precalers have won thirteen games in a row in a 16-2 season, and a win Friday would tie their school record of 14. UMSL will be trying to keep their record with the Precalers spotless as the Rivermen have won all seven games played between the two teams. Concordia is led by 6'4 forward Bob Blechta, scoring 23 points per game, and 6'7 center Larry Thies, averaging 14 points and 11 rebounds per game. A large turnout is expected at this contest as UMSL students should arrive early in order to get good seats.

Steamers Elections

Recently elected Steamer's Club officers will assume office at the next Steamer's meeting to be held Monday, March 2 at 7:00 in room 208 of the Administration Building. Mike Ohnrt was elected president replacing Marty Hendin, Ed Farrell was re-elected vice-president, while Kathy and Paul Hopp were chosen as secretary and treasurer respectively, replacing Bov Bricker and Mike Checkett. Checkett was elected sergeant-at-arms and Gerry Benz was selected as next year's Riverman mascot, replacing Neil Frieden.

Senior Honored Monday

Monday February 23, UMSL closes out their season with an 8:00 encounter with Eastern Illinois at Viking Hall. Before the game, UMSL's seniors Denny Caldwell, Chuck Henson, Joe Laukemper, Rick Utzage and Denny Whelan (pictured above with Coach Smith) will be honored as part of "Senior Night." The five seniors will compose UMSL's starting line-up for the game.
