St. Louis experts discuss rape questions

Sunday Magazine is a weekly show that can be heard Sunday evenings on KWMU FM91. Rape was the subject Feb. 3. The Current has decided to print an edited version in this week's edition for the benefit of those students who were unable to listen to it. This program on rape was written and broadcast by Mike Fitsimmons of the KWMU Student Staff. The guests first give their unique views on rape, then following is the dialogue between them and Mike.

Colonel Susan Hart, a member of the St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners: "There is an under-reporting of rape. Some say only one in four and some say one in ten, obviously nobody really knows what the under-reporting really amounts to but it's a big problem."

St. Louis Prosecuting Attorney George "Buzz" Westfall: "In 1979 there were approximately 90 rapes where the police came in and applied for a warrant. Charges were issued in about 70 of these cases. I think in St. Louis County all told, 225 rapes were reported last year."

Jamie Meyers, of the Womens Self Health Center: "I definitely look upon rape as a crisis situation in terms of something that has suddenly happened that was unexpected and it will in most cases be changing a persons life drastically at that time. Rape is also a situation where a woman doesn't know if she's going to live through it, especially when violence or a weapon is involved."

Susan Murray, of the Crisis Intervention Service of the St. Louis Police Dept.: "Everybody is a potential rape victim. There are a number of people who advocate fighting back and a number of people who might just stay at home and never go out but then a lot of rapes happen at home so that's not the safe way. I don't know a way to avoid rape. I mean, people can be careful, but careful people get raped."

Pam Kline, Director of the Rape and Sexual Assault Center on the Campus of Southern Ill University at Edwardsville: "We opened up in Oct. 1977 and so we've been here about 2½ years and in that time we have served 325 victims of rape and sexual assault, the youngest being three years old and the oldest being 84 years old."

Debra Erink and Marla Leberman of the Women Take Back the Night Coalition: "Before I joined them, I think it was just a bunch of concerned women who got very angry and women and he will attack many women."

Debra Brett, of the Victims Service Council in St. Louis Co.: "I think it's certainly harder sometimes to talk with a victim who doesn't want to express a lot of feeling. I think the type of crime they went through, the extent of brutality in the crime, end within the first year after rape."

Fitsimmons: "A number of rapes go unreported, and the figures on the ratio of unreported to reported rapes range from 4-1 to as much as 10-1."

Statistically, the number of reported rapes has increased dramatically over the last five years. Whether or not this is a'so cared a lot about other women getting, and we're tired of it."

Rape Series: Part one

Mary Bremner, Director of Aids to Victims of Crime: "As you may have been noticing recently, a number of people who are being arrested for rapes are being charged with 3 or 4 or 5 different rapes. Most rapists are repeaters. It's not a spontaneous crime that occurs because a guy sees a sexy-looking woman and decides to rape her. It's a crime that occurs because a man has some problems in dealing with his own sexuality and out of anger or hostility attacks the treatment they received immediately after the crime occurred, how they felt about themselves before the crime occurred, what type of supports they have in their family and among the friends; those types of things deeply affect what happens to a woman after she's been sexually assaulted and how she responds."

Greg Norberg, of RAVEN: Rape and Violence and Now: "It's true. It's an awful statistic. Something like 60%. Some people say more but that approximately the average. Six out of ten relationships, marriages, indicative of an actual increase in the crime itself no one can be sure. But there are more cases entering the legal system and if the victim chooses to go through the legal process she encounters many more obstacles. The system itself can often be seen as an adversary. The ability to get a conviction is not always possible."

"Buzz" Westfall: "Rape is probably the most difficult case to prosecute because the defendant always has two options open to him by way of a

TAP connects City with UMSL

The City of St. Louis and UMSL will be joining forces in a new program called the Technical Assistance Program (TAP).

Mayor Jim Conway and UMSL Chancellor Arnold B. Grobman announced the merger of people and resources in a press conference February 11. The program, to be funded by budget commitments of $20,000 annually from both institutions, will deal with specific operational problems of the City that can be identified and resolved inexpensively in a matter of days.

"We are, of course, delighted to enter into this unique relationship. . . to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of services to the public," Grobman said in a prepared statement.

The program will be managed by a seven-member committee consisting of three UMSL faculty members and three City officials with E. Terrance Jones, UMSL professor of political science and director of the Master's program in Public Policy Administration, chairing the committee.

The TAP will be used in several ways around the city. "The sociology professors might be able to pinpoint demographic data especially important to housing developments," Conway suggested. He also said that business professors could possibly identify new kinds of industries or commerce that the City should cultivate. Conway cited Wayne State and the City of Detroit as an example of a similar program. There, Conway said, the Detroit Museum of History used a sociologist/historian from Wayne State to update the public education description and recorded messages on the Museum's exhibits. Another project there helped the Detroit bus system obtain a grant from the U.S. Department of Transportation to train its bus drivers.

"For a number of our faculty members, more accustomed to dealing in theory than in practice, this can be an exhilarating and broadening experience," Grobman said.

"Too many of us, and that includes University students, remain too distant from the activities and forces that influence the lives of our citizens," Grobman said. "UMSL finds in this project another way to demonstrate its deep interest and earned commitment to the quality of life and learning offered throughout the metropolitan area."

UMSL representatives in TAP will be David Gustafson, associate dean of Business; Charles Korr, associate professor of History; and Everett Nance, director of the Midwest Community Education Development Center.

The City representatives are John Thomson, president of the Board of Public Service; Donald Guilfooy, director of Public Utilities; and Alphonso Jackson, director of Public Safety.

Fraternity wants your blood

The Beta Alpha Psi fraternity will be looking for blood again next week.

The fraternity is asking for all students that are physically able to assist them in reaching their goal of 350 pints of blood at this year's blood drive. The drive will be held February 19 and 20 from 9 am to 2 pm in room 126 of the J.C. Penney Building.

This year's drive will feature individual and group prizes. The group prize will again be a half barrel of beer to the organization bringing in the most people.

To qualify for the contest, each group must turn in a current membership roster before Feb. 18. Also at least half of the groups members must enter with a minimum of 25 people within and out of the group total.

Last semester the contest was won by the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity with the Student Affiliates of the American Chemical Society coming in second.

WICI meeting Feb. 17

Women In Communications, Inc. (WICI) is a professional organization for men and women pursuing careers in communications. The petitioning chapter of this organization at St. Louis University is joining with interested students at UMSL to create a larger and stronger student chapter, more capable of serving student needs, as well as being a more significant force in local and national WICI groups.

WICI offers the following benefits to its student members: access to job information, locally and nationally; internship opportunities; workshops and seminars from both student and professional points of view; monthly meetings featuring speakers from different areas of professional communications; contacts in all phases of communications; and personal contact with professional WICI members.

The February meeting of the student chapter of Women in Communications, Inc., will be held Feb. 17 at 3:00 pm in Room 210, Xavier Hall (3733 West Pine) on the campus of St. Louis University. All interested students are invited to attend. A film of last year's Clarion Award winners (similar to advertising's Clio Awards) will be shown, and a regular business meeting will follow.

Students unable to attend but interested in WICI may contact Kathy Kegin, 5488 on campus or 374-2089 after 6 pm or Melanie Beauchamp, 353-2605.

Schary to teach dance course here

Anna Marie Schary, a St. Louis dance instructor, will teach a modern dance exercise class here, 6 to 7 pm, Feb. 19 through April 8. The class is designed to help participants develop stamina, improve muscle tone, work off unwanted inches, strengthen and stretch the body.

This class combines principles of modern dance and general toning exercises. "Modern Dance Exercise" is part of UMSL's Discovery Program for Women, offered by UMSL Continuing Education.

The registration fee is $43. For more information call 453-5961.

Investments club formed

A group of UMSL students has organized a new club to explore the world of investments. Membership is open to any UMSL student with an interest in the securities markets as an alternative source of income. Stock, bond, options, mutual funds, U.S. Treasury Bills and Bonds will be among the investment alternatives explored.

An investments game will also be a regular item on the agenda of each meeting. Individuals or groups may establish unique portfolios to suit their needs and observe the trend of their portfolios.

The club plans to host several guest speakers from the investment, banking and academic community to assist students in strengthening their knowledge of investments and investment related career opportunities.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday, Feb. 13, at 1:00 pm in SSB 334. If there are any questions, call Chuck Wiese at 892-3593.

Safety seminar here

University of Missouri-St. Louis will offer a two-day seminar on "Quality Assurance for Product Safety," Tuesday and Wednesday, March 4 and 5, from 9 am to 4:30 pm in the J.C. Penney Building. The seminar is designed to help product safety specialists, engineering supervisors, product foremen, and quality control personnel develop quality assurance programs while minimizing product liability costs.

Mae-Goodwin Tarver, instructor for the seminar, is a Fellow of the American Society for Quality Control and is an ASQC-Certified Engineer and Reliability Engineer. She teaches at the Illinois Institute of Technology and is the principal of Quest Associates, consultants in quality management, quality engineering, and statistical technology.

A detailed brochure including a course outline is now available. Registration fee for the program, including meals and parking, is $195. For information, call David Klostermann of UMSL Continuing Education at 553-5961.

Teaching award open

If you know a teacher who deserves recognition for excellence in teaching, application forms for the Amoco Outstanding Teaching Awards are now available at the information desk and in room 111 E.O.B. on the Marillac campus.

Only full-time faculty members who teach in the undergraduate program are eligible for the contest.

Applications should be accompanied with as much documentation as possible. Documentation may be established by letters from former students, copies of student surveys, or other materials that would help demonstrate good teaching.

Teaching is broadly defined to include activities such as advising and assisting as well as class room performance.

Two awards will be given, both carry a $1,000 prize.

Past winners are not eligible. Previous recipients have been Mary Wilson, Art; Denny Bettisworth, Speech; Ruth Jones, Political Science; Ingeborg Goessl, Modern Languages.

Joyce Corey, Chemistry; Earl Wims, Business; George Mowrer, Education; Eugene R.

Corey, Chemistry; Joel Glassman, Political Science; Marcus Allen, French; Dick D. Miller, Education; Alicia Ramos, Spanish;

David Ganz, Accounting; Robert Markland, Business; David Griesedieck, Philosophy; Judith Handel, Sociology; Paul Travers, Education; Charles R. Granger, Biology;

Jane Williamson, English; E. Terrence Jones, Political Science; Doris Trojcek, Education; Charles Kuehl, Business; Larry Lee, Physics; Fred Willman, Music.

Homecoming plans announced

The time of this year's Alumni Homecoming Night basketball game, UMSL vs. Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville, has been changed. Game time will be at 9 pm Friday, February 15.

This year's Homecoming activities will be jointly sponsored by Student Activities and Alumni Activities.

According to Rick Blanton, director of student activities, seven women and five men will make up the final court, determined by student elections last November.

The court will be introduced at half-time of the Homecoming basketball game. The King and Queen will be officially crowned at the dance.

The dance will be held in the Carpenter's Hall—1401 Hampton Ave.—at 8:30 pm, February 16.

Dancing will be from 8:30 pm to 12:30 am, with music provided by Synod, a six-piece band from Chicago.

The dance tickets are $4.00 per person. This fee includes soda and ice for the entire evening.

Tickets for the dance will be on sale at the Information Desk from Friday, February 1 to Friday, February 15 or until they sell out. Only 400 tickets are available and are being sold on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Chicago to open Women's Festival

Judy Chicago, one of America's leading women artists, will open the Second Annual UMSL Women's Festival Wednesday, March 26. Chicago, a highly instrumental force in the contemporary art scene, will discuss the evolution of her work leading up the auditorium piece 'Dinner Party,' at 8 pm in the J.C. Penney Auditorium.

Chicago has been instrumental in introducing female imagery into the art community and in developing a new environment for women artists. She pioneered feminist art education at California State University and at the California Institute of the Arts. Her autobiography, Through the Flower: My Struggles as a Woman Artist, placed feminism in a new historical perspective.

Since 1974, Chicago has been involved in the creation of 'The Dinner Party,' which combines many of the goals Chicago first described in her autobiography. 'The Dinner Party' is a major art exhibit that has toured the United States since March 1979. This monumental, room-sized sculpture, portrays women's history and culture through the symbol of a dinner party.

A carefully researched work of art, it contains 39 place settings designed by Chicago and executed in different traditional china and needlework techniques. The plates, which combine Chicago's innovative ceramic techniques with traditional china painting processes, are a tribute to women and are a symbolic history of women's achievements and women's struggles. Each plate represents a mythic female character or historic figure who has made a contribution to women's lives throughout history.

Chicago's appearance is sponsored in part by a grant from the Missouri Arts Council. For more information on the J. Chicago lecture or a complete schedule of the March 26-29 UMSL Women's Festival, call 553-5294.

Patrolman causes stir

Early Tuesday afternoon, a group of students sat in the University Center's lounge, playing cards. The students were located in "the cube," one of the room's three small seating area extensions.

One of the card players looked up from the game as UMSL police patrolman Michael Abernathy entered the room, and smiled. "You look like you're finally in a good mood," Abernathy allegedly said.

"He should be," said the student's cards opponent, Greg Adler. "He's got all the spades."

Abernathy looked at Adler. "Your mama's got all the spades, boy," he reportedly said, in a raised voice. Then he walked away.

Tuesday's incident was just the latest in a string of problems the students have reportedly had with Abernathy. Late last November, he arrested Adler in the lounge for possession of marijuana. His on-the-scene search of the student was based on an anonymous tip the police had received, that Adler was smoking pot in the building. According to the state constitution, the search violated the student's civil rights.

Since the arrest, according to several students in the lounge, Abernathy has been a regular in the building. He often walks past the cube, they said, and waves and smiles in a childlike manner at the students sitting there.

On one occasion, Adler said, he was pulled over by Abernathy as he left the campus. The officer began asking questions "that I felt were simply none of his business," Adler said: about how his court case was going, who his lawyer was, et cetera.

When Adler asked Abernathy why he had been pulled over, the patrolman allegedly told him that he did not have a parking sticker. Adler seems to have been pulled over, while his car was moving, for a parking violation.

UMSL's police department has received a great deal of flak in past years, most of it pertaining to the official duties of police patrolmen.

Occasionally, however, it becomes necessary to criticize one or more officers for the ways in which those duties are carried out. In this case, the criticism appears to be justified.

Patrolman Abernathy has demonstrated in the past three months that he has no business wearing a uniform. His ignorance of the law and of proper police procedure--and, if proved, his outright rudeness to students--are inexcusable.

There are two distinct dangers that may result from Tuesday's incident. One, Abernathy's actions may be looked on with favor by other members of his department, and incidents such as this may become commonplace.

Two, the students may over-react to such behavior. Minutes after Abernathy allegedly made the comment Tuesday, the cube was in an uproar. A physical confrontation between students and police must not be allowed to take place.

This editorial may seem terribly one-sided. Abernathy refused comment on Tuesday's incident, and the only sources willing to relate what was said during the confrontation were the students in the lounge. If their allegations are founded--and that seems likely, based on the number of contacts made to the Current by different students following the incident--there can be but one course of action:

Abernathy's got to go.

Registration needed

Dear Editor:

This is a 'dangerous time,' if more people would join the Reserves, or National Guard, perhaps we wouldn't need to reinstate the peace time draft.

The peace time draft has been credited for our country's being able to win World War II.

The registration for the Selective Service is needed, today's volunteer Armed Forces are below strength, and are inadequate to protect our nation, not to mention our national interests and allies.

I doubt if any political candidate, no matter who he is, will gain any points politically by reinstating a draft. However, one is needed; if started today it would be nearly two years before a selection could be made! Can you or anyone else guarantee what the Soviet Union is going to do? When do we consider an act of aggression a threat to the security of the United States? Do we start thinking about a registration for a draft when Soviet Tanks roll up I-70 and down to the UMSL Blue Metal Building? That obviously will be too late! When do we start? It would also be too late after the world's oil supply is captured by the Soviets in the Persian Gulf; where do we draw the line and when should we start getting worried? Some students here say we should not worry until New York or California are destroyed, or invaded!

How do you know that the invasion of Afghanistan is not a move to capture the Persian Gulf? (Does the Current have a Kremlin source?) It puts the Russians within bomber range of the Straits of Hormuz, the western world's oil shipping route. Perhaps Afghanistan was a socialist country before the Soviet Union's armies invaded, still it was independant. Using your analogy, it would be all right for France and Sweden and other socialist countries to be invaded by Russia, because they are socialist. The nation that we should worry about being invaded next is Pakistan, not so much Iran, but the fall of one or both would put the western world's oil pipeline in further jeopardy. With Russian control of the world's oil, the western civilization will not remain as we know it today. Through oil blackmail, the Soviet Union could control the world and that can happen much quicker than we could train even one recruit that would be drafted under a New Selective Service program. Many students here have said that they would sign up in a minute if we were attacked and went to war! My advice to the youth of America is do not wait for a war to get some kind of military training! Be Prepared! There are several ways to do just that; you can join the National Guard or a Reserve unit in your home town or metropolitan area, in this way you can also earn money to further your education. If you are a student at UMSL you can take Military Science on campus and get the basic skills without any obligation to join the Armed Forces, also usually the ROTC program provides for a draft deferment.

If more people would sign up for a Reserve program, perhaps we wouldn't need a draft. 'A well-regulated militia is necessary to the security of a free state.' 2nd Amendment, U.S. Constitution.
D.A. Radford

Speaking against military registration

Dear Editor:

The primary reason the reinstatement of military registration and the draft is opposed by many Americans is because it is unconstitutional. The Constitution of the United States of America guarantees citizens many rights and the Thirteenth Amendment, in particular, protects the individual from slavery (either to an individual or to the state). Military Conscription, a denial of personal freedom, is clearly against the principles of the Constitution.

Besides being unconstitutional, the institution of the draft of 18-20 year, or of any single age group, is prejudicial. Economically, individuals of this age group are generally in a problematic situation due to low income and often high expenses. Because of this lack of power and influence, young citizens have little political pull. Hence in a time of world-wide inflation the most economically expendable, the young workers and students, are the prime candidates for conscription.

For once and for all the draft issue should be decided by a Constitutional amendment. This issue is of crucial importance to American civil liberties and national defense.

Responds to smoking student's letter

Dear Editor:

I'm writing in response to 'A Smoking Student,' whose letter appeared in the February 7 issue of the Current.

Smoker agreed that there should be no smoking allowed in elevators, and even in some specified parts of the Snack Bar and Cafeteria. However, Smoker replied that Theresa, or any other non-smoking student, could easily use empty classrooms to study in when the provided study rooms are smoke filled.

I find it hard to contain my anger, as a non-smoking student, whom cigarette smoke irritates greatly. I, too, have faced Theresa's problems.

That she, or anyone else, should have to use an unsatisfactory place with unsatisfactory desks, etc, to study in solely to escape cigarette fumes is a poor example of concern for other people's feelings and rights.

While every person has the right to pollute their lungs as they see fit, they have no right to pollute others' services due to irritating smoke.

Study rooms should be set aside for non-smokers, as well as sections in the cafeterias and lounges. Sections of the library should be set aside for smokers, as smoking there is also an increased fire hazard, akin to elevators.

Rebecca A. Hiatt

More on the draft

To The Editor:

Last week Carter called for the resumption of registration in preparation for reinstating the draft. For those men and women who are opposed to war for moral, philosophical, religious or other personal convictions, this is a frightening development. In 1948 the Central Committee of Conscientious Objectors was formed to advise or support those who chose not to cooperate with the military system. At the time only men were drafted, but today there is a real possibility that women also will be asked to serve. If one is filed with the CCCO before registration or the draft are required, the difficulties involved in obtaining alternative service are reduced considerably. Also if large numbers of people of all ages declare themselves conscientious objectors, it will be a sign that we are not willing to accept war as a possibility, particularly at a time when war might easily mean annihilation for humankind. For more information about CCCO and how to file write: CCCO/P.O. Box 15796/Philadelphia, PA 19103.

If you are interested in working to stop registration before it is too late and we are already caught in the draft process, call the World Community Center at: 862-5735.

Discusses interview with Phillips, MSSC president

To the Editor:

By all rights, the interview with Minority Students Service Coalition (MSSC) president Hugh Phillips that appeared in the Current of February 7 should be allowed to die a merciful death. However, speaking as a student from a "majority white high school" in the suburbs, I resent anyone or any minority trying to blame me for allegedly oppressing them. Perhaps I shouldn't concern myself. The only students who could possibly take the interview seriously are those that have the same narrow perspective that Phillips has.

It is a pity that the Current is perceived (by Phillips) to be only covering "white things" for the last 15 years. What Phillips implies is that whites and blacks do not share any universal experiences. Furthermore, UMSL's curriculum is "fast-paced" for everyone alike, whites as well as blacks. This is a big time! You either perform or you're out! The curriculum is discriminatory in a way. It discriminates against all students who don't put forth the effort; don't read their assignments; don't attend their classes; aren't able to perform well on tests or express themselves in writing. After all, that sheepskin we're after shouldn't just signify that we occupied a seat at UMSL for four years.

The alleged "racial problem here at UMSL" is a laughable overstatement, as is Phillips' explanation for the whites' abandoning of the city. Even if it were to case, what then were the reasons for many affluent blacks leaving "the Ville" in the 1950s?

The MSSC, supposedly a coalition, should be cautioned not to stifle the other minorities they're supposed to serve. It appears that, at least on one campus, blacks have already received an undue amount of attention

Washington D.C. trip for UMSL students

An UMSL student will get a chance to spend a weekend in Washington, courtesy of the offices of Student and Academic Affairs.

The event will be the Center For The Study Of The Presidency's Eleventh Annual National Student Symposium. The conference will be held at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Washington D.C. April 11-13.

The Center For The Study Of The Presidency is 'a non-partisan, non-profit educational institution chartered by the Board of Regents of the State of New York.'

Seven hundred students and faculty members from four hundred selected colleges and universities will participate in this year's conference. Students are selected based upon their scholastic performance, leadership and character. One student from UMSL will be selected by the Office of Student Affairs and the Office of Academic Affairs to attend the conference with all expenses paid.

The theme for this year's conference will be 'The Presidency and Priorities for the 1980's.'

James C. Olsen, University of Missouri President, will introduce Thomas F. Eagleton, United States Senator (D. MO), who will deliver the keynote address. Other noted speakers to address the conference will be Ronna Frejberg, Special Assistant for Congressional Liaison, General David C. Jones, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and John B. Anderson, Republican candidate for the presidency.

Rick Jackoway, a junior majoring in Speech Communications, participated in the conference last year. 'It was a good opportunity to meet students from around the country instead of just the UMSL area. While I was there, I got to meet with two senators and other administration officials,' Jackoway said.

The theme of last year's conference was 'An Evaluation of the First Two Years of Carter's Administration.' Jackoway feels the conference will be a good experience for students to observe how the executive office works. 'I became more aware of how it was difficult for a president to get anything accomplished; he doesn't have all the power a president needs.'

Jackoway feels the conference this year will be of special interest to the Missouri students because Senator Eagleton and Olsen will be there.

Applications should be turned in to the Office of Academic Affairs, 401 Woods Hall. Deadline for applicants is March 5, 1980.

Rape

defense, and self-defendants frequently make up their defense, they fabricate, they lie. They're guilty, so they have to come up with some facts or some testimony or some friends or relatives who are going to get on the stand and lie for them."

"In a rape case, if the identification evidence is weak, if the victim, for instance, isn't sure who did it to her, and the circumstances aren't real collaborative, aren't really strong in support of her identification, then in all likelihood his defense will be, 'I didn't do it, she's mistaken, I'm the wrong man.'"

On the other hand, if the evidence is very strong, then his defense is going to be, "Yes, I but it was with her consent," and this is a good defense. Rape has to be against her will and unless he beat her half to death or left bruises on her, a jury is going to be hard-pressed to know who is telling the truth. Unless the police catch him running from the scene which rarely happens, they're just very difficult cases to prosecute and that's why I don't want a high minimum."

"I'm not one to suggest that women should struggle with the rapist at all. They'd be lucky enough to chase the attacker off. On the other hand, maybe they'd be unlucky enough to have their throat cut or their face just brutally beaten in. So I wouldn't suggest that any woman struggle at all. It's something that she's going to have to determine under the circumstances of the case. But no question about it, if the woman is not physically bruised or damaged in any way then there's a very good possibility that the man's defense is going to be that it was consent."

"There's no question about it, lawyers that practice criminal law realize that the older a case gets, the longer it is before it comes to trial, the more advantageous it is to his client. If it's an identification case, memories become weak, the identification is subject to more cross examination. Like you mentioned, a rape victim has lived with it so long that she just doesn't want to both with it now, whereas she would have done so if it had been three months after the crime. Witnesses move away, we lose contact with them, sometimes they die, any number of things can go wrong with a lawsuit. The longer it is from the time of the crime to the time of the trial the better it is for the defendant and the worse it is for the state."

Fitsimmons: "A rape is a disruptive crisis affecting all aspects of a woman's lifestyle. Her family life, her sexual life, the way she dresses and reacts to certain situations. She may feel anger, maybe guilt, probably fear. The person you knew yesterday may be very different from the person you know today, and there is a great need for understanding and support among her friends and family."

Murray comments: "A rape is very disruptive and destructive to the victim. It disrupts her normal lifestyle; and so for her, it's very much a crisis, and for her family, it becomes a crisis because it is very disruptive to them."

The victim is scared; she may feel guilty, she may feel angry, she may just feel sad. She may be overwhelmed. Her family is usually quite upset by the situation, particularly if it's a younger person, or even a woman who lives at home. Some women need someone to talk with them for a couple of hours. Some women have families who they prefer talking with. We first make sure their medical needs are taken care of and that they're physically safe, that they have somewhere to go where they'll be safe and that they have food there, and everything that they're going to need for a couple of days."

"The next step is to deal with their emotional needs, to let them know some of the things they may expect as a result of having been raped, and some of the services that are available to them. It's pretty easy to second-guess. It's not unusual for a woman to feel that she could have done something different."

Meyers: "Rape is a crime of violence, its not a crime of sex to begin with. Whether or not the woman gets beaten, she has been taken by force. There are a broad range of things that she could be feeling but most often I found, when I'm working with a woman who has been raped, is that she feels really guilty. She blames herself. She's wondering what she did that encouraged the man to rape her. She often goes through a deep depression right afterwards because her whole self has been violated. She no longer feels safe wherever she goes. She might feel a lot of things regarding men. She might be afraid to go out at night by herself. She might be afraid to be alone in her car. She might be afraid to be alone. She might have a lot of nightmares. She might have trouble eating or sleeping. It's a real trauma. It really changes a woman's life and it leaves a scar forever, I'm sure."

"A lot of women will hide themselves, because they feel it is the way they look."

"One thing that often happens if she's married is that it's very hard to resume a normal sexual relationship with her husband. She might go through a phase where she's feeling really angry at men and this might come out on her husband. She might also be feeling guilty and worthless which will effect her self-esteem and this will effect her relationship."

Fletcher discusses famous photography

"You're only as good as the last job you shot." So said T. Mike Fletcher, noational award-winning photographer, during a recent visit to UMSL.

Fletcher specializes in industrial and political photography, shooting everything from the rocket car for Anheuser-Busch to presidential candidate, Robert Kennedy. His client list is impressive and includes Time and Fortune in addition to his corporate and political clients.

Talking about his political candidate assignments, Fletcher says, "I respond to my subject visually. I look for a repeated gesture or habit that expresses the individual—the visual rhythms and harmonies that make him human. I caught Hubert Humphrey gesturing in a particular way and said to myself, 'now, that's Mr. Humphrey.'" Other political candidates that Fletcher has shot over the years include Edward Kennedy, Robert Kennedy, John Lindsay, James Symington, Stuart Symington, John Danforth and Richard Nixon.

The time Fletcher has to shoot ranges from four days with a political candidate using four Nikon F-2's with motor drives to one and one-half seconds with a rocket car simultaneously firing several Nikon's with motors, a Nikon that shoots ten frames a second and a Hulcher sequential camera. Fletcher uses a unique technique to mark his film gates that determines which camera shot each particular roll of film.

Asked about his most exciting job Fletcher smiled saying, "My favorite job is always my next one."

Fletcher was on the UMSL campus addressing the "Photography in Society" class. A display of his photography will be in the Center for Metropolitan Studies through February.

Parking problems peeve Poole

"No, Marcie, you may NOT faint again," I announced forcefully to a fellow carpool passenger. "We'll find a parking spot soon, and then you may vomit on a Volkswagen. As for the rest of you," I continued, swiveling my head around to face the other UMSL students in the car, "if I hear just one more chorus of 'Swing Low, Sweet Chariot,' I'm gonna ram this car into a fat professor and end it for all of us."

My nerves were on edge, as were those of everyone in the automobile. Although it was only the fifth week of school, our

As could be expected, there are several reasons for this ridiculous shortage of parking spaces on campus.

While there is no physical proof, many of us have theorized of a pixieish administrator who derives a thrill by watching cars searching into infinity for a parking place. This elfin type becomes unglued at the mere thought of a space for every automobile, and proceeds to purchase old used cars to double park at various key spots around campus (at the entrances to the up and down ramps in garages, for example).

space in the student lot. One is finally forced to settle for a "slim-line" space, which enables one to pull in (but not get out of) one's car - except through a complicated maneuver which involves crawling out through the car's rear opera window, an exercise in futility for anyone with chest or waist measurements larger than eleven inches. These spaces do provide satisfaction, however, to those students who have no intention of attending their classes once they arrive at school. (The student council is pushing for drive-in fast food service to accommodate those individuals group of four students had already logged over forty hours searching for parking spaces on the UMSL campus. These long hours spent behind the wheel had prompted various mental and physical maladies among the UMSL veterans. Nervous breakdowns were popular, as were Parkinson's disease and arthritis (from holding the steering wheel in a death grip). Both the female students in our car had, over a period of two years, become loony bin regulars. One was now schizophrenic, and she varied her personalities according to her class schedule and/or the day of the week. The other was an epileptic which, as you probably don't know and certainly don't care, is not a mental problem. However, she delighted in swallowing her tongue at the least provocation, and at the most inopportune times (once behind a clump of bushes by Stadler Hall, which proved quite embarrassing when a crowd began to gather to cheer on this seemingly impromptu romantic conquest).

Of course, our pixie administrator owes a debt of gratitude to the many ninnies and morons who are incapable of pulling a Chevette into a space less than twenty-two feet wide. These Italian Grad Prix entrants angle that Chevette sideways into an opening so as to obtain maximum parking slot coverage. Success is measured by the number of spaces made inaccessible to other drivers.

Last, but certainly not least, are the officials who designated which areas were to be student parking lots. (The rule of thumb used states that all student lots must be a hop, skip, and a mile hike from the nearest building). Obviously, the faculty wielded considerable influence on this issue, either through bribes or blackmail, for they were certainly given the choice spots. This in itself is acceptable, for the professors are the mind-shapers, and we students but the shapeeers. What is irksome is to rumble past twelve unused spaces in the faculty section, while searching in vain for a who find these "slim-line" spaces a challenge).

"There's a space about five hundred yards up ahead!" announced Marcie, the official carpool lookout.

Everyone in the car tensed for the big moment. Ethel and Ferd hung their heads out of their respective windows to scan for other approaching vehicles. The orders came quickly now.

"Four wheel drive coming from the left!"

"'69 Pontiac passing from behind!"

"Okay, get ready," I commanded, wetting my lips with anxious anticipation. "Marcie, get out on the roof, and be prepared to throw your body across the space as I approach it."

"Ethel, get your bullhorn in hand. When I give the signal, scream FIRE."

"Ferd, is your shotgun loaded? Good. At the moment we are two car lengths from the opening, start sniping."

"And for God's sake, DON'T MISS."

MOVING IN: UMSL's Donald Brown looks for an opening in UMSL's 66-64 victory over Southwest Missouri State [photo by Paul Killian].

Rivermen upset SMS Bears; lose to tough Wright State

Jeff Kuchno

Just when it seemed as if the roof was about to cave in on UMSL coach Tom Bartow and his team, the Rivermen came up with a spirited effort and upset the Southwest Missouri St. Bears, 66-64, February 6 at UMSL.

The Rivermen entered the contest with a 6-13 record and without the services of leading scorer Rick Kirvy, who injured an ankle in practice two weeks ago.

The Bears, on the other hand, were hot off the heels of a 80-66 victory over the top-ranked Division II team in the nation, Central Missouri St., a few nights earlier. That victory, coupled with the fact that Southwest defeated UMSL earlier in the season by a score of 80-71, led most observers to believe that another SMS victory was imminent. But, it wasn't to be as the Rivermen turned the trick.

UMSL dominated most of the game, leading at halftime, 38-32. The Rivermen led by twelve points with 6:48 remaining in the second half and appeared to be on their way to an easy victory. However, hot shooting by SMS forwards Mike Robinson and Harry Pollicape during the stretch run cut UNSL's lead to 63-62 with 38 seconds to go.

William Harris, who led UMSL in scoring with 19 points, sank two free throws with 21 seconds remaining to give UNSL some breathing room. But Pollicape countered that with a 15-foot jumper and UMSL led, 65-64. On the ensuing inbound play, Harris looked up at the clock, which showed 10 seconds, while SMS guard Gary Dunn snuck in and tied up Harris, forcing a jump ball.

Harris won the tip and was fouled with four seconds left. He got the first free throw and then missed the second. On the rebound, Any Hood came down the floor for the Bears and missed a 25-footer at the buzzer.

Complimenting Harris in scoring for UMSL included Gary Rucks with 13 points and Dennis Benne with 12. Mike Robinson, SMS's leading scorer with a 25 point average, led the Bears with only 14 points. Robinson scored 37 points the last time the two teams met.

UMSL women cagers hold on to flicker of hope

Terri Moore

Lincoln University eliminated UMSL's women's basketball team from any chances of a second place finish in divisional play with a 85-63 victory. There is still a slim chance the women will receive a wild card spot in the Missouri State Championship, though.

There were two major factors contributing to the loss: the play of the guards, who turned the ball over 14 times, and poor free throw shooting. After trailing by only three at half time, UMSL's women missed nine free throws in the second half, six of them coming on the front end of a one and one.

"In the second half, our guards played terrible," said UMSL coach Joe Sanchez. "You can't start an offense if they can't bring the ball down the court. The guards have been a problem all year, we lack leadership at the point position."

"All our guards have little experience. Experience is a major factor in a winning ball club," Sanchez added. Of the six guards on the team four are freshmen, and two are sophomores. One of the bright spots last week was the play of senior Pat Conley, who lead the team in scoring against Lincoln and Culver-Stockton.

"I really enjoyed seeing the immense improvement in the play of Pat Conley," said Sanchez. "In my mind, Friday night will be Pat Conley night, her last home game. She's come a long way." He was also pleased with the play of Lori Smith, Myra Bailey, and Connie Lisch the last couple of games.

The women shot free throws considerably better two days earlier against St. Louis University, as they made 24, but still came up short, losing 62-56. But, as in the game Friday, the guards were the big problem. They were unable to get the offense going, and couldn't get the ball into the forwards.

After a 79-75 loss to Culver-Stockton on Saturday, UNSL now holds an overall record of 12-17. As in its game against Lincoln, the women shot very poorly at the line, missing on 15 of 24 attempts.

"It gets me totally upset to see that kind of poor performance at the free throw line," Sanchez said. "It's a simple indication who can and can't play."

Ten of UMSL's 17 losses have been decided at the line; the loss was by a spread that could have been made up on the amount of free throws missed. The team also lost six games by four points or less. "Our record is deceiving in a way," Coach Sanchez said. "We've come a long way."

The team will finish out its season with two big games. Tonight, the women face Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville at Kiel Auditorium beginning at 5:30 in a preliminary game for the Streak, the women's professional basketball team. UMSL students can obtain tickets at half price at the Kiel box office.

Saturday's game against William Woods is a big one to a lot of people, including Sanchez, who coached at William Woods last year.

They come into the game with a 15-7 record and are undefeated in district play.

"I hope they play Saturday night with pride. I hope they finish the right way," said Sanchez.

"As soon as this season closes, I'll start thinking about next year. I'm definitely out recruiting, and, I'll find the missing link before we open up next Thanksgiving. We'll be tougher than nails next year, we hope."

Harris pays dividends for young UMSL cagers

Jeff Kuchno

When UMSL basketball coach Tom Bartow showed an interest in a gangling tenth-grader from Memphis, Tennessee a few years ago, he must have known what he was doing. And now, four years later, William Harris is paying dividends for Bartow and the Riverman cagers.

Harris, a 6-foot-3 sophomore guard, has started every UMSL game since his arrival. He averaged 12.8 points per game his freshman year and has scored 16.1 per game this season.

With two seasons and the remainder of this one still to come in his college career, Harris has already surpassed 600 points. At his present pace, he will become the second leading scorer in UMSL history behind Bobby Bone's 2,678 points. Hubert Hooseman is second with 1,351.

However, setting scoring records is not Harris' foremost prerogative at UMSL. He would much rather be winning.

"Last year, (in which the Rivermen finished 7-19), was the most frustrating thing I've ever been through," said Harris.

"Coach Bartow made me stick with it, though."

Bartow has been an integral figure in the slender shooter's basketball career. Harris attended the Bartow basketball camp in Fayette, Missouri when he was in tenth grade. And ever since, their respect and esteem for one another has been mutual.

"He's been with me ever since I was a sophomore," explained Harris. "He's the main reason why I came here."

Harris was hotly recruited in high school. And with good reason. He started three seasons at C.B.C., averaging 17 points his sophomore year and 20 in both of his last two. In his senior year, he led his team to a 20-7 finish and then received offers from over 40 colleges, including such biggies as Vanderbilt, Murray St. and Mississippi. But with Bartow at UMSL, his decision was an easy one.

"I can't complain about coming to UMSL," he said. "I've been on the floor every game since I came here and although we've been losing, I've been learning a lot."

A good chunk of Harris' education on the court hasn't been pleasurable. He has learned how tough it is to lose and what it takes to win. Placing the team ahead of the individual has been his biggest lesson.

"The other night, I scored 28 points against Southeast and we lost," he said. "Then, I scored 19 against Southwest and we won. So, the game I scored 19 was better for me because we won."

In those two games, Harris was forced to run the offence due to the absence of floor leader Rick Kirby, and he handled the situation well.

"Yea, it puts a little pressure on me (Kirby being out), but it makes me play better because I know what I have to do," he said. "With Rick out, everybody has been working harder. Earlier in the season, everyone looked for Rick or me to do all the scoring. Now, everyone is making a contribution."

Unfortunately, the losing continues. The Rivermen are headed for their second straight losing season, but Harris sees brighter days ahead.

"Coach Bartow has drilled in us the winning attitude, and we've been working harder to win," said Harris. "We want to win and there is no one who wants to win more than Coach Bartow."

"I think by the time I leave here, we'll have a real good team," he added. "I know that for a fact."

With confidence like that, the Rivermen can't go wrong.

Women eye regionals as Men end dismal season

Mary Dempster

Washington University, St. Louis University and UMSL. Three tough contenders battling it out in a swimming pool on a Saturday afternoon. Sounds interesting doesn't it?

Well, it was. The annual SLACA (St. Louis Area Colleges Association) meet brought some of the most talented women swimmers together and the outcome was SLU 131; Wash. U. 125; UMSL 123.

It was considered a very close meet by UMSL coach Don Maier. As for excitement, there was plenty of it. Seconds before the last relay, Wash. U. and UMSL, both with 115 points, were closing in on SLU's four point lead. "It was a meet," said Maier, "that could have gone either way."

SLUH held its advantage, though, by excelling in over half of the individual events and staking claims on the two relays. Wash. U. swam strong but Maier felt that they were somewhat startled at the UMSL women's performances. "We were actually beating them at one point."

Finishing third in the meet, the women had nothing to be ashamed of. Nearly everyone of them placed very high. Patty Wilson came in first in the 50 meter free while Martha Casey placed in the 50 breaststroke. Bitzie Hebron took second in three events.

Other women who contributed to the UMSL cause included Michele Drain, Theresa Eppert, Cheryl May, Karen Cernicek, and Paula Smith

For the next two weeks the women will be training for state competition which is scheduled for February 21, 22, 23. All 10 of them will be going and most of them have already qualified for regionals which is the following week.

Men

For the men, their season came to an end after Saturday's competition. They totalled 16 points that day, which did nothing for their final no win record. But all four of them had very promising individual performances to be proud of.

Probably one of the most influential swimmers on Saturday was John Althoff. He took first in the 100 backstroke and third in the 200 back. Because John is in a McDonnell Douglas CO-OP program, he is free to swim only during alternating semesters. So John has only been with the team for one month which compares drastically to the five months the other men have on him. "He did really well," said Maier.

So, for John Slthoff, Mitch Fries, Robin Metra and Steve Walters the meet is over and they can go home. But they can proudly take with them their individual accomplishments, their improved times and their memories...and save them all for next year.

Wilson qualifies for nationals

Mary Dempster

Patty Wilson has her very own ticket to nationals this year—a 25.92 qualifying time in the 50 meter free style event.

"It feels so terrific," said Wilson. "I've been on cloud nine all week long."

But it happened in a very unexpected way. In an exhibition scrimmage meet against Meramec last week, Wilson found herself pitted against her younger sister and four of her old high school friends, all from Meramec. The six of them had been on the starting blocks awaiting the gun, when Patty suddenly heard a click. Thinking the gun had misfired Patty stood up only to discover that the other five swimmers were already halfway across the pool. "I couldn't believe it. I missed the race."

So Patty was placed in the same event (50 meter free) but this time against the men. There were four clocks placed on her, just in case.

Patty took second and after it was over, noticed that the four timekeepers were all in a huddle. "The next thing I knew," said Wilson, "Julie (Mank) was in the water slapping me on the back, screaming that I had made it."

How did Wilson feel?

"Weird," she said. "It still hasn't sunk in."

Rivermen

"Shutting Robinson down," explained UMSL coach Tom Bartow, "was the key to winning the ball game."

On Monday, the Rivermen were not as fortunate. UMSL travelled to Wright St. and lost to the nationally-ranked Raiders, 82-69.

The Raiders, who entered the game with a 19-2 record, led at halftime, 45-37. With 9:12 to go in the game, though, UMSL fought back to tie the score at 57. Then, Wright St. reeled off eleven straight points and waltzed the rest of the way.

Harris again led UMSL in scoring with 19 points while 6-foot6 freshman Tom Houston contributed 16. UMSL's record dropped to 7-14 with the loss.

UMSL intramurals serve students

Did you know that here at UMSL, many students are giving money away? That's right. UMSL students pay a $27 activity fee at the beginning of an academic semester and then many of them don't take advantage of the activities available, while others do.

Of course, most people enroll at UMSL to get an education and get out. If they have a job, as most do, their time spent on this campus is minimal. They go to classes, go home, go to work, party (not necessarily in that order) and that is it.

However, UMSL's administration and those concerned with the welfare of the campus would like to see this situation change just a bit. UMSL has publicized itself in the past as an equal opportunity institution that provides various services for the St. Louis community and its students. UMSL has backed up this proclamation by establishing certain activities for students and one of those is the UMSL intramural program.

This program, under the direction of Jim Velten, who is in his fifth year at UMSL, receives all of its funding from the state. However, the student activity fee has something to do with that allocation.

Out of the student activity fee comes $2.50, which is set aside for the Bond fund of the Mark Twain Building. So, in essence, UMSL students contribute money to pay for the facilities where intramurals are held.

Even though this organization boasts of more participants than any other organization on campus, the one to two thousand who do participate comprise only 15 percent of the total enrollment. This figure seems low, but it about average for a commuter campus like UMSL. Still, it could be better.

On page 15 of this issue, there is an article on the present condition of the intramural program and a list of the upcoming activities. The article also touches on the reason why more students don't participate in intramurals. It is, of course, because UMSL is a commuter campus.

It is a fact that most students don't want to stay out here late in the afternoon or drive back in the evening. However, if one wants to have some fun, make new friends and get in shape, intramurals is definitely worthwhile.

KUCHNO'S KORNER

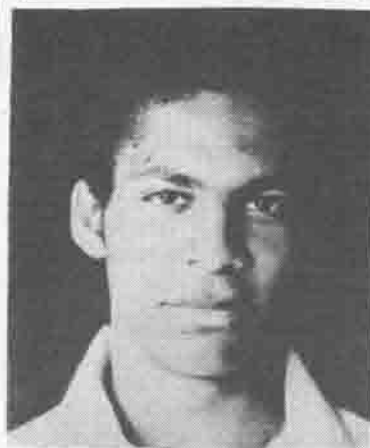

After all, not everyone can compete in intercollegiate athletics. Intramurals give students an opportunity to participate in organized activity. Participating in an intramural event would probably take up only one afternoon or evening a week. And it's a good bet that there are more than a thousand students at UMSL who can spare one night a week.

UMSL intramurals offer something for everyone. From touch football and five-on-five basketball to Hoc-Soc and white water kayaking, UMSL has it. If you like to bowl, wrestle, run, play golf, racquetball or tennis, UMSL intramurals has activities scheduled in these areas, too.

The reasons for the improvement of UMSL intramurals are involved. The emphasis being placed on the women's programs and last year's addition of Mary Chappell as an assistant has beefed up the female participation in intramurals. Up-and-coming popular sports like racquetball, which has increased from 12 to 50 participants in only a few years, have had an impact. Expanding the tennis courts from three to six courts hasn't hurt, either.

So, next time you wonder what there is to do on campus, sign up for your favorite intramural activity. At least, get your money's worth.

Athlete of the week

Men's basketball

William Harris, a 6-foot-3 sophomore guard on UMSL's basketball squad, has been named UMSL athlete of the week. Harris, a native of Memphis, led the Rivermen with 19 points in a 66-64 upset victory over Southwest Missouri St. last Wednesday at UMSL. He also scored 19 points in Monday night's 82-69 loss to Wright St. For the season, Harris is averaging 16.1 points per game and leads the team in total points.

Wrestlers stalled

Rick Capelli

Everything did not go well for the UMSL wrestling team last week, to say the least.

First of all, Thursday night's match with Southeast Mo. State and Forest Park Community College was cancelled because of a withdrawal by SEMO. There was considerable bad feeling and controversy surrounding this last minute move by the Indians.

"Apparently the withdrawal by SEMO was a decision by the coach and was based on considerations involving their conference, the MIAA," said UMSL coach Tom Loughrey. SEMO had a meet the next night with the league-leading Central Missouri and simply did not want to bother coming to St. Louis the night before, Loughrey said.

"They signed a contract with us before the season and I feel they should have honored it," he added. "This meet will not be rescheduled and the possibility of an official forfeit is being looked at."

Friday brought more bad news for the grapplers as they traveled to Kirksville for a dual meet with Northeast Missouri State University. UMSL turned in a flat performance and were soundly defeated 42-6.

"We just didn't have it," Loughrey said. "We did a lot of little things wrong and against a team like Northeast, you just can't play it that way."

There were two winners for the Rivermen. Roger Toben, wrestling in his first match in two weeks won at 142 pounds. Also freshman Mike Linham turned in a fine performance winning easily at 158 pounds.

Any chance of reconciliation on Saturday for the grapplers

UMSL women to have special night, Saturday

"A salute to women's Basketball" will be the theme for the UMSL women's team against William Woods College this Saturday night at the Mark Twain Building.

The 7:30 game will be preceded by two Catholic Youth Council girls' games beginning at 4:45. All women's and girls' basketball teams will be admitted free to all three games.

UMSL intramural activities heat up cold winter season

General consensus has it that UMSL intramural activities receive little attention around campus. Because of this, many students might not know all the intramural events that do exist. Schedules showing all the activities that are taking place in the winter semester can be picked up at the athletic office in the Mark Twain Building.

In charge of all the events is Intramural Director Jim Velten. He tries to include events that are appealing to students and schedule them as conveniently as possible for the students. But there are a few problems to overcome. With UMSL being a commuter campus, the intramural program is at a disadvantage for a couple of reasons. First, with everybody commuting, the participation is not as great as it would be if some of the students boarded, because many of the students don't want to make an extra trip up to UMSL for intramural purposes. But if the students lived on campus then there would be no extra trip to make.

Secondly, because of this, the time for the events is more limited. The events must be

Secondly, because of this, the time for the events is more limited. The events must be scheduled when the students will be around. This means that instead of seven days a week to schedule events Velten is limited to five. He can't schedule anything on the weekends because nobody will be around. Because of this, conflicts often arise in the scheduling of events, which, unfortunately, may lead to an event or two being dropped.

But the intramural program does give people a chance to exercise, have fun, and meet people with interests similar to their's.

Here is a list of the events that have yet to begin and some information on each.

Basketball—Everything has begun in basketball except the Coed Tournament. The registration deadline for this is Feb. 19 and the starting date is Feb. 25. This is new to the intramural program. So far, one team has committed itself but many others are talking.

Golf Tournament—The deadline here is Apr. 10 and the date it begins is either Apr. 11 or Apr. 18, depending on the weather. This tournament will be held at the St. Charles Country Club. In addition to the tournament, there will be a "longest drive" contest and a "closest to the pin" contest.

Hoc Soc—Here will be a Coed Tournament that will begin on Mar. 24. The registration deadline is Mar. 19. This is essentially the same as Indoor Soccer, and because of the big hit the Steamers have been, Velten is hoping they will help stir interest. This tournament has had scheduling conflicts with the Coed Volleyball League, and because of that, it may be dropped.

Marathon—This event takes place on Apr. 16. The signup deadline is Apr. 10. The run will be three miles in length.

Racquetball—Here the Men's Tournament and Coed Doubles have yet to begin. The Mens' begins on Feb. 18 and the Coed Doubles on Mar. 3. The registration date for the Men's has already passed, but the Coed Doubles' date is Feb. 27.

Softball—In this sport there is a Men's and Women's League and a Coed League. Registration for these ends on Mar. 28 and play begins on Mar. 31. Again, as in golf, the weather is important in the success of failure of the activity.

Tennis Tournament—This event has Men's and Women's Singles and Open Doubles. The Open Doubles can feature either two men, two women or a coed team. The signup deadline for all three is Mar. 20 and the starting date is Mar. 24.

Volleyball—The only league is the Coed League which is scheduled to begin on Feb. 18. But because of a scheduling conflict, the league won't begin until after the Spring Break. The starting date and the registration deadline haven't been determined yet.

Wrestling—This is a one day event scheduled for Feb. 27 with the deadline date being Feb. 21. The format for how the event will be run will depend on the number of participants.

UMSL faces SIU in homecoming

An opportunity to surpass their victory output of last season faces the UMSL Rivermen cagers when they face the Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville Cougars tomorrow night in the homecoming game at UMSL.

The Rivermen, who were 7-19 last season, enter the homecoming game with a record of 7-14 and have won only once in their last four games.

SIU-E entered play this past week with a record of 11-11 and is led by 6-foot-8 senior center Bill Branz and 6-foot-3 senior forward Jerome Nelson. Branz is averaging 15 points and 14 rebounds per game while Nelson has averaged 14 and five, respectively. Branz's rebounding average is third best among the NCAA Division II players.

UMSL holds a 14 to nine series advantage over SIU, but the Cougars have emerged victorious in the last three meetings including two last year. SIU defeated the Rivermen on UMSL's home court last year, 68-52, and did the same a few weeks later at Edwardsville, 80-79.

The UMSL-SIU game will begin at 9 pm to be preceded by a high school game between Northwest and East St. Louis at 7. The schools' junior varsities will meet at 5:30.

Tickets will cost $1 for UMSL alumni and $2 for everyone else and will be good for all three games.

Wrestling

was lost when the scheduled meet with the University of Missouri-Rolla and Lincoln was cancelled because of traveling conditions.

"It was tough practicing all week for SEMO and then having them pull out" said Loughery.

"We are still very upset about the situation."

The Rivermen will try to get back on track tonight as they travel to Springfield for a dual meet with Southwest Missouri State University.

UMSL foosball champs score at Columbia

Two teams of UMSL students grabbed first and second place honors in the Commuter Colleges' region eleven foosball tournament which included colleges from the states of Oklahoma, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri, held Feb. 8 at the University of Missouri-Columbia's Beady Commons.

Tim Murta and Jim Fogal of UMSL defeated Dan Kall and Chris Link, also of UMSL, by a score of 5-4 in the deciding game of their championship match. Murta and Fogal, who compiled a 7-0 record along the way, captured the title match, three games to two. Kall and Link were 5-2 in the tourney.

Ironically, Murta and Fogal were defeated by Kall and Link in the UMSL foosball tournament, which was held Jan. 31 at UMSL.

The team of Murta and Fogal will now advance to the Hyatt Regency tournament to be held May 24 in Chicago, Illinois. The winners of that tourney will receive a $500 scholarship.

Joe Sanchez: He turns women cagers into winners

Jeff Kuchno

Whenever someone becomes accustomed to winning, it makes losing that much harder to take. UMSL's Joe Sanchez knows the feeling.

Sanchez, a native of New York, has led the women basketball team to more victories, in this his first year at UMSL, than the last two seasons combined. Unfortunately, the women still have a losing season, which is almost unheard of for a Sanchez-coached team.

Sanchez has coached women's basketball for five years, two at Bishop Lynch High School in Dallas, Texas, the last two at William Woods College in Fulton, Missouri, and this year at UMSL.

At Bishop Lynch, Sanchez took his team to the state finals and won both years. He had three All-State juniors on his team the year he decided to leave for William Woods and that made his decision extremely difficult.

"It was a hard decision because I probably would have had another state championship team if I stayed," explained Sanchez. "But, I wanted to coach in a college and so I took the job at William Woods."

Sanchez inherited a women's basketball program at William Woods that was failing terribly. It took him only one year, though, to change all of that.

In that first year at William Woods, Sanchez led his team to 26 victories and equaled that total again one year later. He would have entered this season with the entire starting lineup returning and a chance to win the state title. So, why did he come to UMSL?

"Well, the first thing I said to myself was, 'What a hell of a challenge!' " he explained, "but life is made of challenges so I accepted the position."

Although the season has been an improvement for UMSL, Sanchez concedes it has been a tough one for him. "I'm not used to losing," he said. "It's been a strenuous year because of the losses due to inexperience, but I'm excited about the future. We have definitely improved."

The records prove Sanchez's point. Two years ago, the women cagers were 1-22 and last year they were 5-19. Under Sanchez, though, UMSL has won 12 games and been close in others that were lost.

Sanchez's present goal is to reach the state playoffs. Eight teams will qualify and UMSL has an outside chance at one of the final spots. "It would be a tremendous accomplishment because we are a freshman oriented club," said Sanchez. "We would be the youngest team in the tournament."

In order to make it to state competition, though, UMSL will likely have to beat William Woods this Saturday at home. And that won't be easy. As Sanchez said, matter of factly,

"We have to beat a team with players I recruited."

It can be done, however. UMSL lost to William Woods by 43 points last season, but earlier this season was defeated by only by only 12 points. Sanchez attributes the improvement to the development of UMSL's freshmen, especially Lori Smith, Kim Ayers and Karen Lauth.

Smith, a 5-foot-11 forward from Lindbergh, is the second leading scorer on the team (behind Myra Bailey) with a 14 point average. "Smith is a terrific competitor and a real team player," said Sanchez. "Lori can do more things than most players. She'll probably break every UMSL scoring record by her junior year."

Ayers has seen plenty of action this year, too, at the pivotal point-guard position. "Kim handles the ball real well and does a fine job," said Sanchez. "All she needs now is a little more experience."

As for Lauth, Sanchez marvels at the potential of the 6-foot-1 center from Rosary High. "Karen is about a year away from dominating someone if she really wants to," he said. "She has to work on her quickness and jumping ability."

Not only have these freshmen improved, but all the others as well. "It's exciting to teach talent like that," explained Sanchez. "This has been a very rewarding year."

Sanchez hopes his players feel the same way. "I'm their number one fan," he said. "I'm thankful to them for giving so much effort. I can't get down on

It's been a strenuous year because of the losses due to inexperience, but I'm excited about the future. definitely improved.' - Joe Sanchez, UMSL women's basketball coach them if I know they've given me 100 percent.

"They are gutsy kids who can't take a back seat to anyone," he added. "They want to win. Their desire is tremendous."

Although this has been a losing season for the women, Sanchez envisions a return to winning ways by next season.

"Next year, we'll be bigger, faster and smarter," he said.

"All the hard work is going to pay off."
