I am very fortunate to have had the opportunity to pursue a graduate degree and write this thesis. As I conclude my time at UMSL, I want to thank a number of people that made my graduate work and thesis possible.

I need to thank the members of my thesis committee, Dr. Peter Acsay and Dr. Patti Wright. They took their role seriously and provided excellent feedback. Their thoughtful comments, questions, and suggestions made my paper much stronger.

I owe a great deal to my thesis director, Dr. J. Frederick Fausz. His class on Indians ignited my fascination with Native Americans and thus had a substantial impact on my life. Dr. Fausz is both an inspiring teacher and scholar; I am thrilled that he agreed to help me take on this project. I cannot thank him enough for his patience, support, and kindness. Dr. Fausz, it was an honor to work with you. Thank you.

Finally I owe a great deal to my family. I want to thank my Mom and Dad, John and Kim Luparell, for supporting me in all of my endeavors. They are the most unselfish people I know and have been my best teachers. I constantly try to live up to their example. I also want to thank my Dad for building the desk that I was able to break in during this writing process. Finally I need to thank my lovely wife, Kristin Luparell. She has walked me every step of the way, provided encouragement, gave me space to work, and willingly took on the financial strain that graduate work inflicts on a family composed of two teachers. I cannot imagine going through this without her. I am very blessed that she is my best friend and wife. Kristin, I do not possess the writing skills or vocabulary to adequately express my gratitude, but please know that I am extremely grateful for all that you do.
