Student senators to hold first seminar

Student members of the UMSL Senate will take part this Sunday in the first University Senate In-Service Training Seminar, an informal orientation session intended to better familiarize them with the workings of the campus' most powerful group.

The seminar, organized by Gary Esayan, a student senator, and Yates Sanders, student body vice-president, will feature discussions of the structure, history and operation of the body and of means to overcome intimidation.

Twenty-five students and 75 faculty members make up the group's membership. The former are elected to one-year terms each spring by the student body.

"BASICALLY* THE IDEA GREW OUT OF THE FACT THAT I was a senator for two years, and I'd go to the meetings and absolutely nothing would happen as far as students were concerned," Esayan said.

"Things were looking really bad," he said. "Attendance was looking really poor as far as senators were concerned. I can't remember a time of having more than 10 (student senators present at a meeting)."

"Gary got together with me and talked about trying to find a way to get all the student senators organized so they could be more representative at the meeting," Sanders said.

Speakers at the seminar will include Chancellor Arnold B. Grobman, who will talk on what he feels is the Senate's role at UMSL; Neil Primm, professor of history, who will discuss the group's past; Dave Ganz, chairperson of the Senate, who will talk on "the nuts and bolts of the whole thing—the committee

Safety hazard prompts closing of major staircase

Students returning to classes after Winter break found a wall blocking the staircase leading up to the cafeteria and University Center.

Some students didn't believe the stairway was closed, but everyone eventually went around the University Center and got in.

The wall will be a temporary problem, according to Bill Edwards, director of the University Center. The wall was constructed, Edwards said, for two major reasons.

First of all, the stairway had become a safety hazard. "The stairway is dangerous when it is wet, and when it is ice covered it's EVEN WORSE," Edwards said. "Also the concrete at the top of the steps had started to chip away causing a further hazard."

The second reason for the wall was a tunnel like effect created by the passageway. "The design of the opening between the U. Center and cafeteria caused a severe problem because of blowing snow,"

Edwards said.

Along with the safety hazard, there was considerable heat loss without the wall.

There is no definite timetable for the removal of the wall. It will be up at least until March, Edwards said.

The temporary wall will probably be replaced by another wall with doors in it.

The physical plant also constructed hand rails on some steep slopes on campus to help if bad weather should hit.

Laue appointed to commission

James H. Laue, director of UMSL's Center for Metropolitan Studies, has been appointed to a national commission on the creation of a U.S. peace academy, the White House announced Dec. 5.

Laue was one of three persons named by President Jimmy Carter to the Commission on Proposals for the National Academy of Peace and Conflict Resolution. The academy, if created, would be patterned after the nation's five military academies.

"Since the 1930's," he said, "there have been 140 different proposals before Congress for this kind of peace academy. None of them ever got out of committee because they were associated too much with the international point of view."

"It was difficult for a senator or member of Congress to vote for a bill which was viewed as a threat to the departments of State or Defense. This bill is a combination of both perspectives and that's what got it where it is today," he said.

In addition to studying the feasibility of such a project, the commission will prepare a report on the institution's size, cost, relationship to the federal government and existing and possible alternatives.

Members of the group intend to conduct studies on the development of new peace-making techniques in such fields as race relations, labor management relations, prison conflicts and environmental disputes. The committee's hearings may be held in as many as 15 cities.

Laue, a sociologist specializing in community conflict resolution and race relations, served as Washington University's vice chancellor for campus affairs prior to his arrival to UMSL in 1975.

He served as a U.S. Department of Justice Community Relations Service official from 1965 to 1969, helping communities solve racial disputes, and has been co-chairperson of the National Peace Academy Campaign for the last three years.

Laue has also served as a consultant to the Danforth Foundation, the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders, the Department of Justice and the Ford Foundation, and has held teaching positions at Harvard and Emory universities, and Hollins College.

He received his bachelor's degree from the University of Wisconsin at River Falls and his advanced degrees from Harvard. His doctorate dissertation was based on studies of the sit-in movement, freedom rides, and other forms of anti-segregation protest.

"War is one way of terminating conflict," Laue said, "but one of its many drawbacks is that it is limited to what sociologists call a 'win/lose' settlement, a situation where one side achieves dominance over the other."

"Over the past several decades there has been substantial development of techniques for peaceful conflict resolution which permit 'win/win' settlements, compromises acceptable to each side," said Laue. "This is one of many reasons why a peace academy should be established. There isn't blood in the streets like there was in the 1960's, but tension still exists."

The commission's other appointees are Elise Boulding, chairperson of Dartmouth College's department of sociology and Arther Barnes, president of the New York Urban Coalition. Also serving the group are U.S. Rep. Dan Glickman (D-Kan.), Rep. John Ashbrook (R-Ohio), William Lincoln, U.S. Sen. Spark Matsunaga (D-Hawaii), John Dellenback and John Dunfey, president of the Dunfey Hotel Corp.

Klostermann promoted

David Klostermann has been promoted to the position of director of credit programs for Continuing Education-Extension at UMSL. He succeeds Kenneth Kinchloe who is retiring this month after six years of service with UMSL.

Klostermann joined UMSL in 1975 as a coordinator for non-credit programs. In 1978 he was promoted to the position of senior education coordinator and named assistant director of non-credit programs. Prior to that he worked with the St. Louis Public Schools Adult Basic Education Program and earlier as an instructor with the University of Missouri Extension Division.

Klostermann holds masters and bachelors degrees from ST. Louis University and is pursuing an Ed.D. in the School of Education at UMSL.

AS director of credit programs at UMSL Klostermann will administer Extension credit course offerings and assist with needs assessment and program development. He will also serve as a community liaison for in-house programs offered off-campus.

Three new courses

Wendell Smith, dean of Continuing Education-Extension at UMSL, has announced that three new studio art courses will be available this semester as part of UMSL's Continuing Education program. Susan Matthews, M.F.A., a former instructor at Ohio State University, will teach beginning drawing, beginning and advanced acrylic painting, and beginning water color painting.

The acrylic painting class will meet Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9, January 30 through March 19, and will include color theory, basic design principles, techniques of impasto, hard-edge and underpainting. Participants in the drawing course will learn basic drawing issues, fundamentals of two-dimensional design, and basic media, Thursday evenings, January 31-March 20 from 7 to 9 p.m. Watercolor techniques and the use of papers and washings will be covered in the watercolor class scheduled Monday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m., January 28-March 17.

Continuing Education Units (CEUs) will be awarded for participation in the courses. The registration fee for each of the three studio art courses is $41.

For information, or to register, contact Dave Klostermann of UMSL Continuing Education at 453-5961.

Workshops to be held

Three workshops designed to develop and sharpen grant proposal writing skills will be offered this semester as part of UMSL's Continuing Education program. The instructor for the workshops is Robert Killoren, grants and contracts officer for the Office of Research Information at UMSL.

A new advanced course designed to give additional training and assistance to persons who possess basic grant proposal writing skills, or for those who have completed an introductory course, will be offered Tuesday evenings from 7 to 9, February 5-March 11. Participants will be asked to write proposals and perform evaluations. The registration fee for the six-week session is $50.

UMSL's standard grant proposal writing workshop and seminar will be offered twice this semester: Mondays from 6 to 8 p.m., March 24-April 28 at UMSL Downtown, 522 Olive Street; and Tuesdays from 7 to 9 p.m., March 25-April 29 on the UMSL campus. The registration fee for the workshops is $56.

For information on UMSL's grant proposal writing workshops contact Joe Williams of UMSL Continuing Education at 453-5961.

Workshops for women

A wide variety of courses and workshops of special interest to women are available through the UMSL Discovery Program for Women. The program ranges from classes in assertive training, stress management and modern dance exercise, to special workshops on teaching children responsibility and building self-esteem in children. Classes are offered here as well as at several other convenient locations including Lafayette High School, Plaza Frontenac, UMSL Downtown, and St. Charles.

New courses this semester include the history of photography, graphic design, basic drawing, beginning and advanced acrylic painting, and beginning water color painting. Other additions to the 1980 Discovery Program for Women are "Women Working Outside the Home: Can We Do It All?", a course on current women writers, and two new one-day workshops on parent-adolescent relationships and counseling victims of rape and incest.

Special courses for women returning to school are available again this semester including "Brush-Up Study Skills", "Math for Mathophobes," and a one-day orientation for women considering courses at UMSL.

A detailed brochure on the 1980 Discovery Program for Women is now available. For a brochure or information on Women's Programs in Continuing Education at UMSL, call 453-5511.

process, what goes on at the meetings, and how a motion is presented," according to Sanders; and Glenn Harwood, an instructor in speech, who will discuss parliamentary procedure.

Ron Finch, director of the Counseling Service, will speak on group dynamics.

"You go to a meeting, and there's somewhat of an intimidation factor there. There's a lot of faculty and there are a lot of things that could make students feel uncomfortable."

The students may also discuss meeting attendance and pre-meeting gatherings. "We want to be a little more organized, and maybe appoint a leader from that group (the student senators) to check with Ganz before the meetings to find out what's coming up," Esayan said.

The program will begin at 1:30 p.m. in the J. C. Penney Building, and will be followed by a 4 pm non-alcoholic reception at the Chancellor's Residence.

Esayan said that 60 to 70 invitations to the seminar were mailed, and that he has received about 30 confirmations. "Putting it together as quickly as we did, I really can't complain," he said.

"It's late in the year to do it. A lot of people have said that," Esayan said. "We're trying to work it so that it'll be carried over from year to year, so that it'll be more or less a permanent function of the Senate. Hopefully, next year it'll be done in the fall."

Grunbaum named pre-law advisor

Freshmen through graduate students who have an interest in attending law school should contact the University's pre-law advisor, Werner Grunbaum, as soon as possible.

UMSL's catalog states that the university has no specific pre-law program. Most law schools have no prerequisites or certain required courses that students must take to gain admission. However, evidence gathered from previous UMSL pre-law students indicates that far too many students are damaging their chances of admission by procrastinating their preparation for entrance to law school.

Admissions have come from every school of the university, including the evening college. Though a large percentage of these admissions are students with majors in political science, there have been admissions from practically every other department.

The pre-law office is located in room 907 Tower. Students can receive information on various law schools, LSAT preparation, application forms, and other information for student use.

Students needing help in this area should contact Jane Iohman, the pre-law secretary, Monday-Friday 9-11am or call 453-5521.

Grunbaum may be reached in his office, 812 Tower, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 11am-12noon and 1-2pm or by appointment. He may also be contacted at home by telephone, Monday-Thursday evenings. The number is 862-1932.

Happenings over vacation

Rick Jackoway

While we have been gone, campus life has continued. The following is a recapitulation of what has happened.

In a perfect ending to the 1970s, about 12 UMSL students surrounded an ex-UMSL professor singing "God Bless America."

Paul Gomberg, ex-philosophy professor here, was the focal point of the demonstration. Gomberg, who failed to receive tenure in 1978, is a revolutionary communist. He was on campus Nov. 30 handing out flyers and seeking donations for Challenge, a communist newspaper.

Some students took notice of Gomberg when he entered the University Center. The students questioned Gomberg about his beliefs for about 45 minutes. The students then started heckling him.

After about 20 minutes, the students gathered around and sang "God Bless America." Gomberg left shortly thereafter.

Also Nov. 30, Rick Murphy and Karen Nagle became Homecoming King and Queen. Thirteen students competed for the two spots. Rick Blamton, director of student life, described the Queen election as one of the closest in UMSL history.

Students packed the lobby of the University Center to overflowing for the first annual UMSL Gong Show Nov. 29. Robbie Danzy won the show with an a cappella number from the "The Wiz." There were some that thought the team of Eric Johnson and Phil Boone should have been in the running for the first prize.

Johnson was without a partner for his "You Don't Bring Me Flowers" number, so Boone unrehearsed came out of the audience to do it with him. The response was a smash success. But on the last word of the song, Charles Granger, a judge and associate professor of biology, "gonged" the team. The gonging disqualified the pair from the judging.

Officials have decided to run another show either this semester or next.

Commencement was held Jan. 6 for over 300 UMSL students. Chancellor Arnold B. Grobman presided over the commencement held in the Mark Twain Building.

Thomas Mayer, president of the UMSL Alumni Association, was the speaker for the exercises. Mayer was a student at UMSL during the early years of the university, 1964-68, and has been active in various alumni activities. He became the first alumnus to serve as a commencement speaker.

Council selects program board for 1980

Nine students were elected to the university's Program Board and two ad hoc committees — intended to investigate parking fees and the institution on a 'stop hour' — were formed at the Dec. 9 meeting of Central Council, UMSL's student government.

In addition, the group appointed a chairperson to its Grievance Committee.

Named to the Program Board were Robin Boyce, Bill Bunkers, Charles Gerding, Ranley Killian, Mary Pierce, Terri Reilly, Laura Ruhrwein, Linda Tate and Cliff Wilke.

The board, headed by Stephanie Kreis, director of programming, selects film and fine arts events to be presented for the campus.

The study of a campus-wide 'stop hour' — a period during the regular school day when all but basic classes would no be offered in order to improve turnout at programming events and UMSL's social atmosphere — was the charge of an ad hoc committee appointed at the meeting. Rick Jackoway was named to chair the group.

The concept of a stop hour dates back to 1977, when Charlie Mays, then student body president tried unsuccessfully to persuade the council to recommend its institution to the administration.

"I think people should have an opportunity to have something like this," said Mark Knollman, student body president. "We're not going to try to have all classes suspended during the hour. If somebody's got a really tight work schedule, they shouldn't have to sit around for an hour."

Another ad hoc committee — designed to determine whether the university's $25 parking fee assessed of students each semester is generating a surplus — was also created at the meeting. According to Knollman, the council will push to have the fee lowered if it is found that a surplus exists.

In other action, Martha Casey was appointed the group's Grievance Committee chairperson.

She succeeds Dianne Thomas, who resigned the post. Casey was chosen from a field of four candidates.

Students need stop days

While some UMSL students had as much as days off between the last day of class and finals, across town at St. Louis University students had as little as 12 hours before finals.

The plight of the St. Louis U. student should not be ignored here because many UMSL faculty members are considering motion, to be brought before the Senate, motions to cut back on or eliminate stop days.

Presently, two stop days are built into the UMSL schedule. In theory those days are reserved for study and cannot be used for tests or classes. In practice, though, some professors give tests and hold class sessions on those days.

So in order to make the theory and practice agree, some professors are considering eliminating stop days from the schedule. Class sessions would be substituted for the stop days.

The UMSL Senate would have to agree to such a change but recent votes show support for such a motion.

The UMSL student cannot afford to be put into a position where finals directly follow classes. Over three-quarters of UMSL students work. And a work schedule rarely leaves time for the intensive study needed for finals.

One proposal asks for stop days to be removed but classes end on Fridays. While this is clearly a better alternative than the St. Louis University schedule, allowing the weekend before finals begin, it ignores the fact that a large percentage of the hours a student works is on weekends.

UMSL students need the buffer zone that stop days allow. Instead of planning their elimination, Senators should make sure that no teacher infringe on the student's rights to have adequate time to prepare for finals.

Tape file suggested

What happens when a student misses a class? As it stands now, if he's lucky, and knows a reliable note-taker in that class, and can borrow a notebook. If he's not lucky, then he never knows what pearls of wisdom that day's lecture contained. When the next test rolls around and there are topics covered he has never before heard of, it's a safe bet they were covered the day he missed.

There is a simple, cheap solution to our hypothetical student's problems. Central Council could, and should start a tape file. This tape file would operate on a library check-out type basis. If a student should miss a day, he could go to the Central Council office and check out that day's tape. He would return it the following day, thereby freeing it for other students' use. If a tape was in great demand, copies could be made.

The tape file could also be used for a student who wanted to make sure that his notes are complete. And this could be of immeasurable value before exam time.

While the Current does not suggest that listening to a tape would be equivalent to being in class and participating, the tape file is a practical way of helping students. Similar such endeavors have met with great success around the country. And this is just the type of project which would get Council into the eyes of the students, where it has been absent for a long time.

Coalition criticizes Current coverage

Ed. note: The Current has been informed that this letter was intended to be run in the last issue of last semester

To the Current:

It is evident that the Current, and the members of Central Council's Executive Committee, namely the President and Vice-President of the student body have once more chosen to use the Minority Student Service Coalition as their scape goat for their inability to establish a strong student government.

The Current states in their Nov. 15, 1979 editorial that, "two weeks ago for example, council members involved in the Minority Student Service Coalition boycotted a special meeting called for the purpose of nominating budget committee members. Those members were disturbed because they felt the slate of names proposed by the rest of council was biased racially and sexually."

In response to that editorial the Minority Student Service Coalition did not, we repeat, did not intentionally boycott the Nov. 4 special meeting for the Budget Committee. The meeting was originally scheduled for 1:30 but there were posters stating the time for 2pm. Evidently the person(s) responsible for constructing and distributing the posters were negligent in their responsibility.

Cortez Lofton, former Student Body President, presently Central Council representative and member of m.s.s.c. did in fact attend the Nov. 11 meeting along with fellow members.

"I arrived at the meeting at 1:15pm. Knowing that it was to take place at 1:30, I and other members of the Council waited until 2pm. A half hour past the necessary time for establishing a quorum. Myself and other members of Council decided to leave because of the lack of a quorum. It was the time element and not a intentional Boycott by myself or anyone else that is a member of Central Council and M.S.S.C. representative to prevent a meeting," says Lofton.

The Current, the strongest endorser of the Yate Sanders, Mark Knollman administration should not try to use the Minority students or its organization as a means to avoid owing up to their poor selection of student body president and vice-president.

In closing, we want to say to the Current, "Own up to your poor selection of student leaders. Stop using the M.S.S.C. to excuse yourself from taking the blame in the President's and Vice-Presidents incompetency to provide strong leadership for the student body."

M.S.S.C.

UMSL cagers show signs of improvement

Schedule plagues young Rivermen

Jeff Kuchno

The UMSL Rivermen cagers, facing an early season schedule that would make most coaches cringe, have nevertheless made strides toward improvement.

UMSL is coming off its worst season ever (7-19 last year), and this season have been a bit more competitive. Things haven't changed much in the won-loss column, though. After 13 games, UMSL's record stood at 4-9, which is the same as its mid-season record in 1978-79.

The season opened on a sour note for first-year head coach Tom Bartow and his young team as the Rivermen were blown out by the University of Missouri-Kansas City Kangaroos, 91-73, in the University of Missouri Invitational at Rplla. November 30. Rick Kirby led UMSL scorers with 20 points.

The next evening, the Rivermen hoped to salvage the third place game, but turnovers (30) led to a 74-72 defeat at the hands of undistinguished Morningside.

On December 3, UMSL came home in search of its first victory. The Rivermen found what they were looking for as Gary Rucks and William Harris tallied 20 points each in a 72-71 victory over Northern Kentucky. For Rucks, a 6-foot-5 junior forward from Urbana, Ill., his performance was the best of the season as he also pulled down 10 rebounds.

The next week and a half, though, was about as miserable for the Rivermen as the last two months have been for the hostages in Iran. UMSL could do nothing right as it lost four games in seven days and watched its season record drop to 1-6.

The week-long disaster began December 5 in Arkansas, where the high-powered Razorbacks dumped the Rivermen, 79-50. Northwest Missouri St. was next (a 73-62 victor at UMSL). Division II power Wisconsin-Green Bay followed that with a 53-45 win and Illinois proved to be rude hosts one night later as the Fighting Illini destroyed the Rivermen, 91-65.

After a 10-day layoff, UMSL returned home and made Benedictine suffer for its misery. The run-and-gun Rivermen, with Rick Kirby at the throttle, overpowered the Ravens, 99-75, for its second win. Kirby, a 6-foot senior guard from Urbana, Ill., poured in 29 points to lead UMSL in its highest single game scoring output since 1977.

The next evening, however, was a different story as the nationally-ranked Eastern Illinois Panthers visited UMSL. EIU lived up to its billing and downed the Rivermen, 76-60.

On January 2, the Rivermen welcomed in the new year with revenge in their eyes as UMSL Kangaroos. With Rick Kirby burning the cords and Dennis Benne bouncing the Kangaroos off the boards like rubber balls, UMSL's wish came true in a 66-64 victory. Kirby led the Rivermen with 22 points while Benne, a 6-foot-9 sophomore from Rosary High School, pulled down 13 rebounds.

One night later, the Rivermen forgot how to play defense and were crushed by Murray State, 93-66. The loss to the Racers dropped UMSL's record to 3-8.

On January 8, UMSL returned home and behind the hot shooting of William Harris and Rick Kirby, waltzed to a 98-77 victory over William Pwnn. Harris tallied a career-high 30 points while Kirby added 21.

Two nights later, the Rivermen hosted Chicago-Circle. In perhaps the most exciting game of the year, UICC prevailed in overtime, 98-95, despite a 24-point performance by Harris.

Women cagers enjoy turnaround

Terri Moore

Outstanding team play, good execution, a patient UMSL offense, and a lot of intensity on defense enabled the women's basketball team to emerge victorious in six of nine games during the last weeks of December and early January.

"Everything has turned around, all the freshmen and upper classmen are working together and playing exceptional basketball. The atmosphere of a winning team is here," said Coach Joe Sanchez.

UMSL's offense was outstanding during this time, scoring an average of nearly 87 points per game. "The offense was executing very well," said Sanchez. "Patience has paid off on offense, and they're also executing their defensive assignments well. Right now, the offense and defense is probably at its top."

The team began its hot streak on December 8, beating Washington University 69-35, but were then defeated by Northern Illinois 86-61. The women went on to beat their next three opponents, Pittsburg State, 73-71, Chicago State, 95-28, and Nebraska Wesleyan, 77-50.

After a loss to Missouri Southern, 90-76, the team took on Emporia State of Kansas, which is the 20th ranked team in the nation, and lost a close one 81-77. Their next game, in which the women scored 56 points (the lowest output by UMSL during the stretch), was a one point squeaker over Baker University.

"Sandy Burkhart was a key factor in the win at Baker," said Sanchez. She came off the bench and was the game's leading scorer with 13 points.

Perhaps the highlight of the nine games was a 110-42 romp over McMurray. In that game, the women set three school records: most points, 110; most goals attempted, 97; and most field goals made, 49.

Five of the women scored in double figures. Myra Bailey, who is the team's leading scorer for the year, led with 19 points. Sherri Cook followed with 15, Chris Meier, 14, Pat Conley, 12, and Connie Lisch scored 11.

The team's overall record is now 9-9, which is more victories than the last two years put together.

Coach Sanchez felt that freshman Kim Ayers has been playing very well at guard. He also said Sherry Cook, Smith and Sandy Burkhart, who is playing around 90 percent after a field hockey injury sidelined her having been playing steadily.

"Pat Conley, Sandy Burkhart, and Myra Bailey are veterans who have been playing well. Also, Myra Lisch has been coming around after a slow start.

St. Louis U. downs UMSL women, 73-65

Jeff Kuchno

UMSL women's basketball coach Joe Sanchez realizes that poor officiating is sometimes part of the game. In UMSL's 73-65 loss to St. Louis U. this past Tuesday at UMSL, though, one call in particular had Sanchez shaking his head in disbelief.

With about three minutes remaining in the game and St. Louis U. leading 68-61, the UMSL bench was slugged with a technical foul when reserve Debbie Busch reported into the game illegally. According to the officials, that is.

"I'm very disappointed because I feel the refs got talked into the call," said a disheartened Sanchez. "There's no doubt Debbie reported, I don't like it when the refs get pressured into a call."

Pressured or not, the officials' call prevailed and guard Julie Goessling stepped to the charity stripe for St. Louis U. Goessling hit two of three free tosses (she was fouled prior to the technical, and the Lady Billikens breezed the rest of the way.

"Our size hurt us," lamented Sanchez. "We did the best we could. We clogged up the middle and forced them to shoot from the outside. Defensively, I feel we shut them down."

Indeed, UMSL played tight defense, but it wasn't enough to stop St. Louis U.'s two highly-touted freshmen Caroline Drain and Kate Hart. Drain and Hart paced the Lady Billikens with 20 and 17 points, respectively.

For UMSL, Lori Smith and Sherry Cook led the way. Smith, a 5-foot-11 freshman from Lindbergh High School, tallied 17 points while Cook added 15.

In the first half, the lead exchanged hands several times as St. Louis U. went into the locker room at halftime with a slim 35-33 lead. It wasn't until the first five minutes of the second half that the much-taller Lady Billikens opened up its lead.

Other leading scorers for UMSL included Myra Bailey with 11, and Sandy Burkhardt and Pat Conley with nine each.

UMSL's next game will be tomorrow night in Jefferson City against Lincoln University. As for St. Louis U., UMSL will receive a rematch in early February. Can UMSL take the Lady Billikens?

"If desire is the key, we can play with anyone," said Sanchez. "We're getting better every time we come out on the floor."

Sanchez's main priority at this time, though, is to prepare his team for games against district foes. These games are important in that the district champion advances to the state tourney in late February. Sanchez feels his 9-10 team has a chance to make a bid for the state title.

"We could surprise a few people this year," predicted Sanchez. "The best is yet to come."

UMSL to join MIAA in 1980-81

Jeff Kuchno

UMSL has been officially admitted to the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association for the 1980-81 school year, UMSL Chancellor Arnold B. Grobman announced last month. All the waiting and speculation is over.

UMSL accepted an invitation which includes admission on a non-probationary basis—made by the MIAA at a December 1 league meeting in St. Louis.

"We are pleased with this new affiliation," said Grobman. "I believe the competition will prove to be beneficial for all the schools involved. I am glad the MIAA decided to offer us membership on a non-probationary basis."

The speculation stemmed from the fact that the MIAA required each conference member to participate in at least eight men's sports. At the time, UMSL had only seven.

In order to meet this requirement, though, the MIAA approved soccer as a conference sport for the 1980-81 school year. The only MIAA school presently fielding a soccer team is the University of Missouri-Rolla.

UMSL, an NCAA Division II Independent, will field MIAA teams in basketball, baseball, cross country, soccer, swimming, wrestling, tennis and golf.

The conference affiliation marks the first time since UMSL started intercollegiate athletics in 1966 that the school will be a member of an athletic conference. In January, representatives of the MIAA will meet to plan 1980-81 conference schedules.

"This is a great step for UMSL athletics," said UMSL athletic director Chuck Smith. "This move should strengthen our rivalries and give our players and fans more identity through playing for a conference championship. The MIAA is respected as one of the best (NCAA) Division II conferences in the country."

Several coaches in the UMSL athletic department, though, expressed some concern over the new affiliation. "If we are to compete in the MIAA, we need equitable funding," said Tom Loughery, UMSL wrestling coach. "I've contacted a few schools in the MIAA and I found out that part of their budgets for travel is greater than our entire budget."

UMSL baseball coach Jim Dix expressed similar sentiments. "We feel we should have the same amount of money as the top schools in the conference," he said. "We've been making all the sacrifices for years and it seems people are ignoring us. Nobody cares about this campus."

The MIAA, which was formed in 1924, will have eight conference members when UMSL joins next fall. The other seven schools are Central Missouri St. (Warrensburg), Lincoln U. (Jefferson City), Northeast Missouri St. (Kirksville), Northwest Missouri St. (Maryville), Southeast Missouri St. (Cape Girardeau), Southwest Missouri St. (Springfield), and the University of Missouri—Rolla (Rolla).

Women

"We're a young team, but we're starting to mature fast and the best is yet to come. No one can deny we play exciting basketball," Coach Sanchez said.

A winning team usually draws big crowds, and Sanchez said the team has been doing just that so far this year. "We've been getting large crowds, which is exciting, and it excites the players."

District play starts for the women on January 18 when UMSL plays Lincoln. Southeast Missouri and William Woods are the other teams in UMSL's division. "It should be quite a race," said Sanchez. The winner will advance to the state championships in Joplin, Mo.

"We're looking to have a good year. They've improved tremendously. Everyone's worked hard, and they've improved mentally and physically," said Sanchez. "I'm excited because I can see the light at the end of the tunnel. We've molded into a very solid team."

Outlook improves for swim teams

Mary Dempster

The UMSL swim team could not win last semester. Last semester's count of two made it absolutely impossible for the men to win a meet. With each swimmer allowed to enter only three individual events the maximum score possible was 30 points. It takes 58 to win.

So the team got two recruits. "With our four swimmers we'll be able to form a relay team," said Coach Maier, "and hopefully better our overall possible score."

As of now, the swim team has a 3-2 record, taking its victories away from William Woods college, University of Arkansas and Benedictine College. But unfortunately, Augustinia and Washington University each stole a victory from UMSL.

Utility swimmer Julie Mank has been having problems lately getting into the water as she was sick for awhile. Karen Cernicek, who is eligible to swim this semester and has already competed in one exhibition meet this year, will add a lot, according to Maier.

But if Maier's swimmers do not seem terribly overpowering now, they will with time. Already with just two-tenths of a second to go, junior Patty Wilson is aiming for Division III cuts for nationals. "Breaking the record was one of my goals coming into the season. It's really weird though, I mean it's just starting to sink into me that I have a chance to get into nationals."

Hoc Soc at UMSL

A greatly expanded field of teams, featuring the eight best teams from the strong St. Louis amateur soccer program, will mark the third annual Budweiser Gateway City Hoc Soc Classic to be held at UMSL's Mark Twain Building, January 25-27.

this year's tourney will feature eight senior teams and eight intermediate teams. The senior squads will play double elimination, and the intermediate teams will play single elimination in the first round and double elimination in the final rounds.

Senior teams participating include Quincy College (the reigning national champions), Kutis (1979 Gateway City Classis champions), St. Ambrose (1978 Gateway City Classic champions), Kutis Collegians, Busch Soccer Club, Mastercraft, Bucks United and Ziegenheins.

Many collegiate All-Americans from the St. Louis area will be featured in the tourney, including UMSL's Dominic Barczewski and Dan Muesenfechter, who will play for Kutis.

The first 1,000 spectators will receive free Budweiser Action Soccer Posters. Proceeds help support the UMSL soccer program. Admission prices are $2.00 for adults, $1 for students and $.50 for children. The admission prices are good for all games on any one day of the tourney.

Men

Midway through the season, the Rivermen have been led in scoring by Rick Kirby, who is averaging 15.5 points per game with William Harris close behind at 15.3. Gary Rucks is next with 11.3 and Dennis Benne is averaging seven points.

Rucks and Benne have been UMSL's top rebounders. Both are averaging about six points per game.

RIVERMAN NOTES: Even though the hardest of the schedule is over, the rest of the season will be not cakewalk. The Rivermen battle Southeast Missouri St. this past Tuesday. UMSL will travel to Southwest Missouri St. this Saturday before returning home to face McKendree next Tuesday at 7:30 pm.

UMSL: A storybook team

This is a story about something new that's happening on the UMSL campus. It isn't necessarily a success story...yet, but it is an interesting one just the same.

INTRODUCTION: Once upon a time there was a young man named Tom, who wanted to coach a basketball team. Not just any team, mind you. He wanted to coach a basketball team with a history of despair and need for a savior.

Well, Coach Tom met the challenge. He took two high school programs and turned them around. He moved on to a small college and did the same. Then, he came to UMSL.

As an assistant for two years, Coach Tom watched the team slide downwards towards oblivion. The atmosphere at the games was terrible. No one came to them. There was no band, very little cheerleading and no "real" tickets. Worst of all, the team was losing.

So, Coach Tom was handed the reins for what would be his biggest coaching challenge. But first, he made a few changes. He ordered the players to shave their faces and tuck in their uniform shirts. He didn't guarantee his team would win, but he did promise two things: that his team would give 110 percent and improve with time.

And now, the atmosphere at the games has changed. There is a band, a lot of cheerleading and real tickets. A few more people are coming to the games, but the team is still losing. Coach Tom's promises, though, seem to be holding up. The team is exciting and improving.

CHAPTER ONE: "the Initiation"

The team opened the season with tournament competition. In the first game, UMSL faced a bunch of Kangaroos from Kansas City, and were beaten by 18 points.

One night later, UMSL played hot potatoe with the basketball and lost by two points to some obscure college called Morningside, which sounds more like a breakfast cereal than a basketball team.

So, Coach Tom's team was quickly 0-2. That's not a very good way to start the season, coach.

CHAPTER TWO: "The Homecoming"

UMSL returned to more familiar surroundings for its home opener. It was a most festive atmosphere. The band played, the cheerleaders cheered and the showgirls danced. Oh yes, and most important, 2,050 spectators looked on as UMSL captured a one-point victory. Way to go, coach.

KUCHNO'S KORNER

CHAPTER THREE: "The Losing Streak"

In one week, UMSL lost four straight games against some mighty opponents. In two of the games, Division I giants Arkansas and Illinois handled UMSL with extreme ease. After the deluge, Coach Tom and his team received a much-needed 10-day break.

CHAPTER FOUR: "The Roller coaster Ride"

In the ensuing six games until the midway point in the season, UMSL won three and lost three with no two wins coming in succession. The team scored 99 points against Benedictine for its second win of the season. UMSL defeated UMKC, a team they lost to in the opener, in the first game of the new decade and scored 98 points a few nights later to win easily.

CHAPTER FIVE: "To Be Continued..."

Yes, this story is far from over. But one thing is for sure. With a much-improved atmosphere and the best Division II college basketball being played in the Mark Twain Building, it would be worth one's while to check out some of the action in the near future. I know I will.

After all, I have a feeling this story is going to have a happy ending.

Busy schedule awaits grapplers

Mike Hempen

The UMSL wrestling team, under the guidance of coach Tom Loughrey, has been performing very well so far this year. The wrestlers who were expected to do well this year have looked good. Some of the unheralded wrestlers, though, Lewie contributed, too. The wrestling program seems to be on the right track in its rebuilding effort.

Two of the wrestlers who received much attention before the season began were Roger Toben and Steve Jansen, and so far this year they have lived up to their big build-ups. Both did well in a meet held at Central Missouri State University in early January. Toben, wrestling in the 142-pound weight class, finished third; and Jansen, wrestling in the 158-pound weight class, finished fourth.

In the McMurray Tournament, Toben, wrestling again at 142 pounds, won his weight division by beating Rich Dahm from Southwest Missouri State U. Dahm was considered the best wrestler in his weight class in the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

"He beat some really fine wrestlers," said Loughrey. And Jansen, wrestling again at 158 pounds, finished fourth, overcoming some nagging injuries that plagued his performance throughout. UMSL as a team finished sixth out of 14 teams in the tournament, compared to 11th last year.

Despite what they have done so far, Loughrey expects Toben and Jansen to keep their performances at peak level. "We feel that in the next four or five weeks they will show what calibre of wrestlers they are," he said.

Toben and Jansen are not the only contributing members of the team. Some of the unheralded wrestlers have helped the team's standings, too. Assistant coach Terril Williams finished sixth in the Midlands tournament in Chicago, despite his having not competed in a year and a half. He also won the 167-pound weight class in the meet at Central Missouri State U. He is using these meets for preparation for the Olympic trials.

Coach Loughrey also had praise for a few of the other wrestlers. Among them were John Vahey, a junior, whom he said was the most improved; Mike Linehan, a freshman, who has wrestled in the 142, 150, and 190-pound weight class, and done well; Tony Rogers, who wrestles in the 118-pound weight class, and Leonard Washington, who competes in the 134-pound weight class.

One thing coach Loughrey is thankful for is that his team has had no serious injuries this year. Except for a few minor injuries, everyone has been healthy; but still, things have not been perfect.

UMSL is 1-3 in dual meets with nine meets left. "I want to see improvement throughout the season and have a winning record in dual meets."

Swimming

"Although it will be difficult to win with only four guys on the team," said junior John Althoff, "individually, we can still improve our times. Althoff specializes in the 200 Individual Medley and the 100 backstroke. Robin Metra, another Riverman, helped UMSL defeat the Benedictione males this past Saturday by setting school records in the 50 and 100 freestyle.

500 freestyle swimmers Theresa Epper and Michelle Drain, two of the freshman swimmers said, "We think we've all improved...only," suppressing their laughter, "we wish there were more guys on the team."

According to Maier, the team's real test of strength will come this semester. The SLACCA tournament scheduled for February 9th will be an important meet. But until then, the swimmers will be competing in at least one meet a week. "I'm fairly pleased with the progress we're making so far," said Maier, "we're good for what we can expect."

All-Americans: Barczewski and Muesenfechter

Jeff Kuchno

In the early 1970's, back when UMSL emerged as a national soccer power, Rivermen performers achieving All-American recognition seemed to be the order of the day.

In particular, four players, Steve Buckley, John Garland, Frank Tusinski and Kevin Missey earned All-American status with Missey the last Riverman to be named to the team in 1974. Since then, however, UMSL has been shutout in soccer All-American selections. Until this past year, that is.

Two UMSL juniors, centerback Dominic Barczewski and striker Dan Muesenfechter, who spearheaded UMSL's drive to its best season since 1973, were named to the 55-man All-American squad chosen by the National Soccer Coaches Association last month.

Barczewski, a 6-foot-2, 180 pound product of Oakville High School, was a tower of strength this past season in the UMSL backfield as the Rivermen reached the playoffs for the eighth successive year with a record of 7-3-5.

Muesenfechter, a 6-foot-1, 170 pounder from McCluer High School, led the Rivermen in scoring with seven goals and five assists for 12 points. He set the school scoring record at McCluer (which was broken this past year by Dan O'Keefe), and had 16 goals last year at Florissant Valley Community College.

For both seniors-to-be, the All-American recognition came a bit unexpected.

"I found out that I made it on Christmas Eve when I read it in the paper," explained Barczewski. "I was pretty surprised because I had put it out of my mind. I didn't want to worry about making the team or not."

Muesenfechter didn't worry about making the team either. It never crossed his mind. "I didn't expect it at all, mainly because I didn't think I had that good of a year," he said. "I thought it could have been better."

The coaches obviously felt otherwise. But then, post-season honors are nothing unusual for Barczewski and Muesenfechter.

In addition to making All-America, Barczewski was named to the All-Midwest team for the third straight year. Muesenfechter, a second-team junior college All-America at Florissant Valley last year, was also a first-team All-Midwest selection, while another Riverman, freshman goalie Ed Weis, was named to the second team.

These three players were the standouts in UMSL's nationally-ranked contingent. Barczewski's best game of the year came against NCAA Division I champion, SIU-Edwardsville, September 30 at UMSL. In that game, Barczewski scored UMSL's only goal and held SIU's premier forward Don Ebert in check as the Rivermen tied the high-powered Cougars, 1-1.

Muesenfechter's value to the team was exemplified in the manner of game-winning goals against Western Illinois and the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle.

The Rivermen finished the regular season with a record of 7-2-5, which earned them the number one seed in the NCAA Division II Midwest-Mideast playoffs. Unfortunately, the Rivermen lost to Eastern Illinois in the title match, 3-0, on UMSL's home turf.

"I thought the season was great up until the end," said Barczewski. "We did what we wanted to do and then blew it."

Dan Muesenfechter

With most of UMSL's squad returning next season, though, UMSL will be a top contender for the national title and Barczewski and Muesenfechter hope to lead the way.

"If we play our cards right, we can win it all," said Barczewski. "We know we can do it." "Yea, we'll have a pretty good team," agreed Muesenfechter.

Of course, being chosen All-American is a tremendous honor, but as Barczewski said...

"I'm looking forward to winning the national championship next season." If so, it would be the icing on the cake of the outstanding collegiate careers of Dominic Barczewski and Dan Muesenfechter.

'I was surprised'

- Dom Barczewski

'I didn't think I had that good of a year. I thought it could have been better'

- Dan Muesenfechter
