U. Center suffers damage

Sharon Kubatzky
features/arts editor

Several ceiling tiles in the University Center were broken and a glass window in the door of the University Bookstore was smashed sometime early Tuesday morning, campus officials said.

The incident was discovered by an employee opening the building around 6:45 a.m. Tuesday, according to University Center director Robert Schmalfeld. There was no sign of forced entry to the building and nothing was reported missing.

One ceiling panel in the lobby area and several in the lounge were broken. Schmalfeld said that hassocks were piled up near some of the broken tiles in the lounge, but that he had no idea how the vandals reached the ceiling in the lobby, which he estimated as being 25 to 30 feet high. In one area, telephone and electric wires had been pulled down out of the ceiling, Schmalfeld said. He estimated the damage at about $150.

The building was checked and locked by the University Center night manager, Yates Sanders, at 11 p.m. Monday, Schmalfeld said. Another check was made by campus police around 1:40 a.m., according to William G. Karabas, director of University Police. No one was scheduled to be in the building after 11 p.m.

Campus officials have no suspects in the incident and are not certain what motive was involved.

"We're at a loss over the thing," Karabas said. "You can speculate on a dozen different theories. We're just looking at all the possibilities."

"It appeared that they were looking for something," Schmalfeld said. "I'm not sure what they were looking for, but there are all sorts of wires in the building."

Karabas said that someone could have gained entry to the building after the safety checks, possibly by use of a key or by pulling a door open with force, or that someone could have remained in the building after 11 p.m. and eluded the safety checks.

This was the first such incident of this nature to occur in the University Center, according to Schmalfeld. He said that the process of the safety checks will be reviewed in order to prevent similar occurrences in the future.

Officials solve studio dispute

Jeff Kuchno
editor

After meeting twice within the last week, officials from UMSL and American Cablevision of St. Louis have solved most of their differences concerning the establishment of a public cable-television access studio at UMSL.

"We have agreed in principle on a document, pending legal and corporate approval," said John Whitley, general manager of American Cablevision. "We've found suitable compromises for just about every issue."

The two parties met for about five hours last Friday and for three hours Tuesday night to discuss discrepancies in earlier proposals. Among the issues that both sides felt were major stumbling blocks in the negotiations were programming rights and the responsibility for operation, maintenance and utility costs.

"In general, our draft called for the splitting of costs," said Blair K. Farrell, director of University Relations at UMSL. "Their proposal had us paying all the costs after remodeling."

Farrell added that American Cablevision's wish to maintain exclusive rights to all programming produced at the access studio was unacceptable to UMSL's Cable-Television Committee.

Under the new proposal verbally agreed upon Tuesday night, though, American Cablevision will give UMSL exclusive rights to its 25 hours of programming for educational use, and also will maintain all equipment in the studio. In exchange, UMSL has agreed to pay all utility costs.

"Our concern all along has been to guarantee that taxpayers' funds and student fees would not be diverted to the benefit of a profit-making operation," Farrell said. "After sitting down and looking at all the costs, though, we could convince ourselves that we were keeping the integrity of the university."

Other changes included placing air conditioning costs under renovation costs. The two sides agreed several months ago to split the costs of renovating two rooms on the first floor of Lucas Hall, which will be used for the studio and control room.

American also was concerned about the studio being available at practical times for the public, especially since UMSL will be allowed first shot at scheduling its 25 hours a week. In order to guarantee proper access time, UMSL has promised to present its schedule to American Cablevision 12 academic months in advance. If conflicts surface, the schedule may be modified by mutual consent between the two parties.

"We want to insure ourselves that we have legitimate access time," said Ken Jaskot, director of community programming at American Cablevision.

Farrell said the two sides will review notes from the last two meetings and then send them to American's attorney in Denver and UMSL's in Columbia, Mo., so that they could produce a final document that would represent both sides.

"It's important they develop one document," Farrell said. "The last time there were two documents, and each one was too one-sided."

Farrell added that issues such as insurance and indemnification were left unresolved by the two parties, and that the respective attorneys would have to work those problems out.

Artwork stolen from display case

Kevin A. Curtin
co-news editor

Six reproductions of ancient Chinese art were stolen from a display case on the second floor of the J.C. Penney Building between Tuesday night and early Wednesday morning, according to UMSL police.

Police said that Karen Rohne, an administrator with the Continuing Education-Extension Division, discovered the items missing around 2 p.m. Wednesday afternoon.

The display case has been fingerprinted by UMSL police. Director of University Police William G. Karabas said the prints lifted from the case are being used in the police department's investigation.

"We've taken the prints and put them with the rest of our files," Karabas said. "Right now, the investigation is still underway. But already we've recovered two of the missing pieces."

The two pieces that have been recovered are a 15-inch tall carved horse and a vase. They were found under a stairwell in the basement of the J.C. Penney Building.

Karabas said that the J.C. Penney Building is one of the most widely used buildings on campus.

Laura Aldenderfer, coordinator of exhibits and collections for the university, declined to comment on the incident.

The artwork was a gift to Chancellor Arnold B. Grobman from the National Museum of History in Taiwan.

They were classic reproductions of Chinese art from the Ming and Tang dynasties.

Burack wins recognition

Brian Hayden
reporter

Cathy Burack has been named one of 10 "Outstanding Young Women of America" by the national organization of the same name. Burack serves as coordinator of the UMSL Women's Center, 107A Benton Hall, Hall.

Burack was nominated by Lowe S. MacLean, Dean of Student Affairs. "I sent Ms. Burack's resume and a catalog of programs typical of the high quality of work [in the Women's Center]," MacLean said. "She runs a very good program that meets the needs of a lot of women, particularly returning students."

Burack, 28, is a native of Philadelphia. She earned her undergraduate degree in psychology from the University of Rochester in New York and her master's degree in community psychology from Wichita State University in Kansas. She has lived in St. Louis since 1980.

"The job I had before this was coordinating a shelter for battered women in Cape Girardeau," Burack said. "Some of the things I do now are training volunteers who will be working with these women. I served on the women's program council for the higher education council in the city."

She said she sees a great need for shelters for battered women because there are only two in the St. Louis area.

Burack said she enjoys her job and UMSL. "I like UMSL. I like it a lot," she said. "I'm going to continue to work in this area in this field. It's really a fine school."

Some of Burack's duties are coordinating the operation of the Women's Center, directing some of its programs, and participating in one-on-one counseling. The center has operated at UMSL since 1973. Some of the programs being offered by the center for the rest of the semester include financial planning for women, basic auto maintenance, and a seminar on the growing herpes epidemic.

For students today, Burack recommends acquiring as many skills as possible. "Maybe because I'm in education I'm always one to push for acquiring as many skills as you can," she said. "What's not practical now might be put to good use in the future."

Burack said she feels there may be some popular misconceptions about the Women's Center. "I'm sure a lot of women think 'If I go in there I'll have to burn my bra,'" Burack said. However, she said the services are socially rather than politically oriented.

A day-care program is one of the things Burack said that UMSL needs most. "The only thing we have now is at Marillac, and there's a two-year waiting list," she said. "Day care would make school a lot easier for many women."

CONGRATULATIONS: Cathy Burack has been chosen one of the 10 "Outstanding Young Women of America" for her work as coordinator of the UMSL Women's Center. She has been at UMSL since 1980.

Food Services increases prices on several items

reporter

Prices were increased on a few items at the Underground and the Education Office Building cafeteria on the South (Marillac) campus to cover the costs of food, according to John Chickey, food services manager at University Center.

Prices went up at the beginning of the winter semester on Dannon Yogurt, danishes and a few meat items, Chickey said.

Central Foods in Columbia, Mo., which services all four University of Missouri campuses, notified the school of an increase on the items at the first of the year, Chickey said. The prices are the same as would be found in the stores, he said.

"We have to be competitive," he said. "Because we are a commuter campus many UMSL students can go to nearby fast-food restaurants and eat."

Cable

Both sides, though, were pleased with the recent turn of events.

"I feel very good about what has happened the last two meetings," Whitley said. "The miles apart have been reduced to mere inches."

"I'm more optimistic now than I've been in a long time," Farrell added.

Except for produce, dairy products and bread, which are bought locally, other foods are made from scratch here on campus. Prices on these can be kept down, he said.

Chickey said Food Services meets with a Student Committee of the University Center Advisory Board to take suggestions, complaints and ideas for changes. He said they try to comply with what the students want.

A suggestion box will be placed in the Underground some time this week, as soon as cards are printed for it, he said. "There should be no more increases in the near future," he said.

Some factors considered before making a price increase, he said, are handling of the product as it is shipped and arrives at the school, preparation for the product, labor and utilities.

Food services at the Fun Palace were stopped on Jan. 3, he said, because there was "too much of a loss." Labor and training workers were costing more than gross profits, he said. Vending services are still available in that building, however.

Though UMSL students can visit the many nearby fast-food restaurants, some of those who eat here on campus have different feelings about the prices.

Freshman Tim Taylor, who has stopped buying yogurt because of the price increase said, "I would go somewhere else. [The Underground] is just convenient."

Faye Riley, junior special education major who said she sometimes brings her lunch said, "I would eat here regularly if the prices weren't so high."

"Compared to going out," Marilyn Lambert, senior preschool education major said, "I don't think they're bad at all. It's better than fast food."

A cafeteria worker who wished not to be identified said he felt a price increase was needed. He said that possibly he would "rather eat at Riddle's, but I appreciate it here."

Ramsey discusses nuclear freeze movement

Matthew T. Hall
reporter

The increasing popularity of a nuclear arms freeze movement is a result of a large number of citizens examining for the first time the history and consequences of the arms race, a nuclear freeze proponent said here Monday.

Bill Ramsey, co-chairperson of the National Freeze Conference, spoke at one of the Monday Colloquium in Social Science Research lectures held in the McDonnell Conference Room, 331 SSB.

The national freeze proposal calls for the bilateral halting of testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons.

"A freeze will not solve all the problems, but it is a first step," Ramsey said, who also is education and outreach coordinator for the American Friends Service Committee in St. Louis.

The entire history of the arms race has been a predictable game of "leap frog," Ramsey said. The United States decided to employ a nuclear policy in 1945, and four years later the Soviets also gained nuclear capability, he said.

Since 1949 the United States has developed the hydrogen bomb, intercontinental ballistic missiles, land- and sea-based missiles, and multiple-warhead missiles with the Soviet Union developing similar weapons a few years later.

"Nothing has broken the momentum of the process," Ramsey said. "Both are poised to make a new leap."

In 1974, the U.S. adopted a "flexible nuclear option" policy designed to strike first and incapacitate the Soviet Union, Ramsey said. This policy recognized the use of limited nuclear war in fulfilling political, social or economic objectives.

"But could you contain the ecological consequences?" Ramsey asked. "Could you contain it militarily or politically? There would have to be a response from the Soviet Union."

The cruise, Trident II, Pershing and MX missile systems are being developed for a first-strike, counterforce attack, Ramsey said. Now there are separate but-consequences of pressing it are limited," Ramsey said. "This makes the use of nuclear weapons more likely. The new logic is use them or lose them."

"If we deploy our Pershing missiles in West Germany as planned, the Soviets have already said that they will put their missiles on launch-on-warning," he said.

This increases the chances of an accidental nuclear exchange, since it takes only six minutes to reach West Germany from the Soviet Union, Ramsey said.

Today is the perfect time for a bilateral freeze, Ramsey said. "The Soviets have been catching up to the U.S. for 35 years. Now there is parity," he said.

Ramsey disputed the claims that the Soviet Union is superior in nuclear capability. The U.S. has the edge in technology resulting in more warheads and better accuracy, and the Soviets have more kinds of missiles and more deployment areas, he said.

tons to push for each kind of weapon in order to launch a nuclear attack, whereas before 1974 there was just one button, he said.

"The person in charge of a particular button now feels that the "U.S. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger has said he would not trade our system for theirs," Ramsey said. If we do not commit to a freeze soon, both countries will destroy the confidence that both have as a result of SALT I and II, he said.

"With satellites, both countries can monitor the agreements," Ramsey said, "but the new weapons are designed to get around the monitoring systems. We must trust our means of monitoring since we do not trust the Soviets and vice versa. In the end, however, we must learn how to trust one another, but that will not happen in the next two or three years."

By 1985 at least 17 countries will have nuclear capability, Ramsey said. We must lead by example so that they will not build, he said.

"When India's leader, Indira Gandhi, came to visit President Ronald Reagan," Ramsey said, "he asked her to sign the non-proliferation treaty on nuclear arms. Gandhi looked at Reagan and told him to sign the freeze."

After ending his talk Ramsey accepted questions from the audience. He addressed the issue of the Soviets controlling the freeze.

Curators to meet in Columbia

The University of Missouri Board of Curators will hold its monthly meeting today and Friday in Columbia.

Some of the items to be presented to the curators from the UMSL campus include the possible filing of the Student Association's lawsuit against the university, the naming of the architect for the planning of the science building, approval of adjustments in student union and activities fees, and the awarding of a contract for roof replacement and repair on Clark and Lucas halls.

It also will be the first meeting for three new curators who will begin their six-year terms this year. The new curators are Jeanne Epple of Columbia, Kenneth Heath of East Prairie, and W.H. Bates of Kansas City. William G. Cocos, the new president of the Board of Curators, also will take part in this meeting.

Newman House to offer lunch

Newman House, the Catholic student center at UMSL, is sponsoring "Mass and Mines-trone" to introduce students to the house.

Beginning Feb. 14, Newman House will celebrate mass and afterward serve a free soup lunch. Mass will begin at noon on Mondays; lunch will be served at 12:30 p.m. On Tuesdays, mass will begin at 12:30 p.m. and lunch will be served at 1 p.m. Daily mass on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays will be held at noon and will be offered at 12:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

"Everyone is welcome to come to the house," said Nick Wagner, associate campus minister. "We also have information available on other events happening at Newman House."

For more information, call the Newman House at 385-3455. The house is located at 8200 Natural Bridge Road.

New escort program exploits students

Because of the rather large size of the UMSL campus, the newly established Student Escort program could develop into a tremendous service for UMSL students. Unfortunately, the new service already has hurt more students than it has helped.

The program, which consists of 16 students who work in shifts from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 6 to 11 p.m. every weekday, basically is a good idea. Its purpose is to protect UMSL students who might be leery of walking from one building to another or to the parking lots, especially at night.

The Student Patrol members, however, do more than just escort students. They patrol the campus looking for something suspicious and then report it to the UMSL police, which is fine. They also ticket cars for parking violations, which is fine, too. The only problem is that this program is funded exclusively by students, which isn't fine. In fact, it's infuriating.

If the Student Patrol members are needed to patrol the campus and ticket cars, the primary duties of UMSL's campus police, they should be paid from the same fund that pays the salaries of our campus police officers.

This program, introduced by Student Association last semester, received $7,500 in student activities money to get under way. At the time, it was understood that the Student Patrol members would not ticket cars. But, as we have seen, they do.

Because the Student Patrol basically is serving UMSL as extra police officers, the $7,500 taken from the student activities fee to fund the program is subsidizing the UMSL police department. The money generated from parking violations enters the parking fund, which already is fat enough. That students are paying for other students to ticket cars is absurd.

It's also unlikely that the Student Patrol is needed during the day. Few students would ever request an escort from their class to the parking lot in the morning or afternoon. It's really only needed at night.

So what do they do during the day? They ticket as many cars as they possibly can, and at least one said he watches television. These students are paid $4.01 an hour. Hence, we're paying these students about $4 an hour to watch television and ticket our cars during the day.

One Student Patrol member said he wrote about 100 tickets in one week. If they have the time to do this, then they probably are not available when someone needs an escort, which is exactly what students thought they were paying for when the program was funded.

In short, UMSL students are being used.

Professor defends action at recent film showing

Dear Editor:

I wish to address the comments of Bernard J. Backer (letter of Feb. 3) concerning my allegedly "obnoxious behavior" of Jan. 21. I must admit that I was relatively shocked to find myself being flagellated in public for what I considered to be a show of private interest in the subject of American defense capabilities. I find it most unfortunate that the Current editorial staff should have printed what amount to extremely serious allegations without offering me any prior notification or fair opportunity for a simultaneous refutation of the charges against me. The overall tone of Mr. Backer's letter is one of personal attack and denunciation. His detailed account of the Jan. 21 incident suggests that he began taking notes on my behavior the moment I walked in to Room 72 J.C. Penney Building. I shall address only what I consider to be his general misrepresentation of the facts concerning my behavior.

I did not attend the film "Countdown for America" wearing the badge of assistant professor at UMSL. I attended as a private citizen, because I harbor a deep respect for the constitutional right of free expression and because I believe that learning involves listening to the positions of others at all times, irrespective of the specific political content involved.

As I entered Room 72, two people were already engaged in discussion, which led me to believe that introductory comments were welcome prior to the film's showing. I had no preconceived notions of who would be in attendance or how the meeting would be structured. Under the circumstances, it was therefore not possible for me to enter into active discussion on the basis of a "prepared commentary."

I had no intention of saying anything at this meeting, but felt provoked enough by Mr. Kiefer's introductory statement that I rejoined with a completely spontaneous response. At no time did I suggest that the entire U.S. military arsenal be scrapped, nor did I propose that we "educate our children as the Soviets educate theirs." I would vigorously oppose efforts to have first and second graders do their intellectual teething on the collected works of V.I. Lenin. My remarks concerning the Soviet emphasis on mathematics and natural science training at the elementary and secondary levels were intended to point out that the long-term prospects of maintaining a credible national defense depend on our ability to produce scientists and technicians. National studies testifying to a growing number of students who do not even command basic reading and writing skills lead me to fear more for my country's security than do the manipulated statistics advanced by many a military-industrialist. There are very few points on which I manage to concur with Ronald Reagan. I submit, however, that the president did present the same argument connecting education and defense in his State of the Union message of Jan. 25.

I found Mr. Kinamore to be quite articulate, and I listened respectfully to his arguments. I "interrupted" at a point when I felt he had completed his comments, but not with a "canned speech."

The "frenzied" character ascribed to my behavior presents me to the Current audience as the proverbial madwoman in the attic, when in fact it is the function of the university to promote substantive discussions of controversial issues, not analyses of discussants' personalities. Having lived in a foreign culture, having acquired extensive language skills in German and a basic comprehension of French and Italian, I am very careful about choosing my expressions. To the best of my knowledge, I have never uttered the term "U.S. Imperialism" in any other than a satirical fashion. It is correct that my remark evoked laughter — of the embarrassed, defensive kind, I dare say. The fact that a woman unknown to me would attempt to defend my academic integrity speaks to the blatantly disrespectful character of that laughter.

I fail to see why CEA "was in no way obliged to even listen to (sic — split infinitive) opposing views, much less provide a forum for bellicose, splenetic tirades from an extremist member of the UMSL faculty." I would remind Backer that even though CFA views itself as a private organization, its meeting was publicly advertised and involved the use of state property. As a member of the UMSL faculty and as a Missouri taxpayer, I had every right to attend this film. CFA supporters' unwillingness to listen to, much less to tolerate, the expression of diverse opinions, on state property, amounts to a flagrant violation of the first amendment of the U.S. Constitution. As an avowed pacifist, it is unlikely that I engaged in bellicose behavior.

I was also within my institutional rights in advising Backer of the resolution of the academic Senate (of which I am a member) last semester regarding the enforcement of a non-smoking policy in university lecture and meeting rooms. That resolution states that smoking is permissible "for informal meetings of not more than 12 persons, provided there is a

Argues with student who claims instructors reap benefits

Dear Editor:

In a recent letter an unknown student made several derogatory claims against the faculty of the School of Business Administration and the economics department. I think most readers, especially those knowledgeable about the School of Business (and the economics department), recognize how groundless and ridiculous those comments were, and therefore I feel no need to respond to most of them. However, this student makes irresponsible and slanderous charges against one of my colleagues, who is a professor of statistics, which requires response.

This student charges the professor with unethical behavior because the professor uses a book he wrote as the text for his class. The student is especially upset because, he claims (1) the book costs $20 even though it is paperback (which the student implies is too expensive), (2) the book has many mistakes, and (3) the professor is reaping large financial benefits from using the book in his class.

In response to the general "charge" it should be noted that for most, if not all professors, the primary concern in selecting a textbook is what book will best aid the students in learning. In a course such as statistics, students find it especially helpful to use a textbook with mathematical notation and philosophy which matches that of the instructor's lecture. Therefore, it is not only acceptable but very reasonable to use one's own book. It is common practice on this campus for professors to use their own text, and it is even more widespread at other universities.

I now would like to respond to the three specific complaints.

1. The book was printed in paperback form at the professor's request so as to keep the cost to the students low! Other commonly used statistics texts cost $25 to $35.

2. Although this professor's book has many typographical errors, I know of no substantive errors. All errors are unfortunate, but every book has them and this is not a good reason to call a faculty member "poor" or "inept."

3. This professor does not receive any of the royalties from sales of this book at UMSL. All such royalties are used for student scholarships! Each year several students receive financial assistance because of these royalties; therefore, students, not this faculty member are benefiting.

In conclusion, I believe this student owes an apology. If this student does not want to print a retraction in the Current, maybe he/she should send an apology directly to the appropriate professor.

general agreement among those present." Backer constituted a majority of one in a vote that was never taken.

As to my "abrupt" departure from the film, I neither slammed the door, nor showered those present with a final bit of verbal abuse. Actually, I had a 1 o'clock appointment with a student, and I left to fulfill this professional responsibility. With respect to "disturbing the many in attendance," one individual left the film before I did, and I counted only seven other people in the room as I left.

The most frightening aspect of Mr.

Backer's letter, aside from questions of misperception, involves his portrayal of me as an intolerant, "faculty extremist," regularly subjecting UMSL students to "intellectual totalitarianism." Bernard Backer has never been enrolled in any of my classes, he has not witnessed my participation in organs of university self-governance, and he has no record of my democratic-political activities on or off this campus. I have been to the Soviet Union, to Czechoslovakia, to the People's Republic of China; I have lived in Berlin for four years, surrounded by 240,000 Soviet troops and countless East German "people's police." I know what totalitarianism is. Based on real-life experiences I have developed a deep appreciation for and a profound commitment to the responsibility of the intellectual. I have welcomed, solicited and even required active discussion and criticism in every class I have ever taught on this campus. Free expression, anchored in the U.S. Constitution, is the best defense against totalitarianism I know. It is those who would hinder its exercise who pose the greatest possible threat to national security and the preservation of democracy in the United States. If Mr. Backer is really interested in discussing a matter of serious political concern, i.e., American nuclear proliferation, he would have the courage to present his convictions and to debate with me personally; instead he has chosen to hide behind the cloak of newsprint, in a manner unbecoming to a university which has recently reaffirmed its commitment to academic free expression.

Regretfully,

Heat lamps help ramps

reporter

The infrared heat lamps, installed over the down ramp at the top of parking garage C, will make the ramp safer and provide better access to parking garage D in snowy weather, according to John P. Perry, vice chancellor of Administrative Services. Both garages are located on the southeast side of campus near the University Center.

"In bad weather," said Perry, "that ramp going into the garage tended to get slick in a hurry."

"Even though it's covered, cars still bring slush and ice in from the street," said Loarn Huff, supervisor of mechanical trades for the UMSL Physical Plant.

The lamps were installed to take care of that problem. They will melt the snow and ice that tends to accumulate on the ramp.

"They work like the sun," said Doug Johnson of Johnson Electric Co., the company that installed the lamps. "They heat the object, in this case the concrete ramp, not the air around the object. It's the most efficient way of heating open spaces."

Perry also said that the ice-free ramp will give students better access to parking garage D in bad weather.

In the case of a severe snowstorm, the top level of both parking garages C and D would be closed off. Students will enter parking garage D by way of the heated ramp. This also would fill up the lower levels of both garages first, giving the maintenance crews the opportunity to clear the snow from the top level of each garage.

The heat lamps, which were installed last August, were "all part of one contract," Perry said.

They were installed along with the ramp covering, the enclosure of the stairwell on the northwest corner of parking garage C and the concrete overpass running from the garage to the J.C. Penney Building.

Perry said the construction was done by the Wachter Construction Co. and the total cost of the project amounted to $230,151. The money was appropriated from student parking fees and parking fines.

Freeze

The people who claim that the Soviets are behind the freeze are the same people who say that they would never favor a freeze, Ramsey said.

"It's an absurd thing to say," said. "It's a political thing." These people also refer to the Reader's Digest article that claims former Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev first mentioned the freeze, he said.

"But Republican Senator Mark Hatfield was the first to talk about it in 1979," Ramsey said.

In response to a question concerning Soviet advances globally, Ramsey said nuclear capability has never kept the United States or the Soviets out of other countries.

Barbara Gillingham, a member of the St. Louis Committee for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze, announced freeze campaign activities.

She also is seeking UMSL students to set up a network to get UMSL students involved.

"UMSL has done nothing," she said. "It's time the freeze has a voice at UMSL."

The freeze committee's phone number is 862-5770.

How to be a romantic and kiss next year's tuition good-bye.

GRAND PRIZE: One student will win a free full-year's tuition. SECOND PRIZE: On each college campus, one winner will receive $50 towards a romantic dinner for two. SPECIAL BONUS: On Valentine's Day, the first 100 students who bring their entry forms to their campus bookstore will receive a red "silk" rose.

OFFICIAL RULES 1. NO PURCHASE NECESSARY. To enter, complete and deposit the Official Entry Form in the Cafe Amaretto entry box at your participating college bookstore. 2. Alternate means of entry. If you do not wish to, or cannot, visit your participating bookstore, you may mail your completed entry to: Cafe Amaretto Sweepstakes, Dept. 097, P.O. Box 37, New York, NY 10046. In addition, print the full name of your college on the lower-left-hand corner of your mailing envelope. You may also enter by handprinting your name and complete address and the words "CAFE AMARETTO" on a 3" x 5" piece of paper. 3. Enter as often as you like, but each entry must be sent by first-class mail (one entry per envelope) or deposited separately. No mechanically reproduced entries. All entries must be deposited by March 7, 1983 and mail entries received by March 31, 1983 to be eligible. Drawing will be held on April 15, 1983. 4. The Grand Prize is one year's college tuition for one person. The Grand Prize winner will be selected in a random drawing from all entries received prior to the deadline by Marden-Kane, Inc., an independent judging organization whose decisions are final. Prize payment will be made in the winner's name directly to the college or university at which he/she is registered. Payment will be made upon submission and verification of documents identifying the winner as a registered student, as well as required invoices for tuition payment. In the event the winner is a college senior and does not elect to enroll in a graduate program, tuition for the current year will be reimbursed. Taxes, if any, are sole responsibility of winner. No transfer, exchange or substitution of prize. Grand Prize winner will be notified by mail and will be required to sign an Affidavit of Eligibility and Release. Odds of winning the Grand Prize depend upon the number of entries received. 5. From each participating college, one winner of a $50.00 gift certificate for a dinner for two will be selected in a random drawing. Odds of winning depend upon the number of entries received at each college. 6. Special bonus: 100 handcrafted roses will be handed out at participating bookstores on Valentine's Day, February 14, 1983, to the first 100 students that deposit their entry forms that day. 7. Sweepstakes open only to registered college students, 18 years of age and older who are residents of the United States and are from participating colleges, except employees (and their families) of General Foods Corporation, its affiliates, subsidiaries, agencies and Marden-Kane, Inc. Void where prohibited by law. All federal, state and local laws and regulations apply. 8. All winners will be notified by mail provided the winning participants are available at the addresses shown on their entry blanks, or have furnished sweepstakes officials with the proper forwarding address prior to the date of the drawing. 9. For a list of the Grand Prize and gift certificate winners, mail a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Cafe Amaretto Winners, P.O. Box No. 226, New York, NY 10046.

'Miss St. Louis Blues'

A friendly contest for a good cause

Story and photos
by Sharon Kubatzky

Michele Bowman and Kathy Ramsey don't have much in common. They didn't even know each other until a few weeks ago, in spite of the fact that Bowman works at UMSL and Ramsey attends classes here. But they're getting to know each other now. They're competing against one another in the "Miss St. Louis Blues" contest.

Of the 20 young women in contention for the title, the one who raises the most money will be crowned "Miss St. Louis Blues." In addition, she'll receive a host of prizes. All the proceeds from the event will go to the St. Louis Heart Association.

To enter the contest, each girl had to submit a $25 entry fee, either paid by themselves or a sponsor. Ramsey was sponsored by her employer, Wetterau Inc., while Bowman was assisted by the Alumni Association of the university.

Bowman, 23, is a secretary and staff photographer for University Relations. She said she entered the contest because she really likes to help others.

"In the past I had raised money for different charitable organizations," Bowman said. "I love to do it. It's a challenge to see if you can reach your goals."

Bowman and Ramsey have been trying hard. So far, Bowman has sent letters to major corporations soliciting donations, gone door-to-door requesting contributions, and, with the other contestants, canvassed patrons at hockey games. In addition, she has organized two social functions, including a Valentine skate party to be held Sunday, Feb. 13, at Aloha Roller Rink in Spanish Lake. Most of the proceeds from that event will go to Bowman for her candidacy.

"If I win, I'll be excited. If I lose, I'll still feel good about it."

— Kathy Ramsey

Ramsey also is relying heavily on door-to-door and game contributions. She's planning to rent a hall and hold a dance. The 22-year-old speech communication major also is investigating the possibility of holding a weightlifting contest at a gym where some friends work.

Neither contestant will say how much money she's collected, because of the nature of the contest. Last year's winner collected nearly $5,000. Bowman said he wasn't sure how much it would take to win this year.

"People are having a really hard time trying to help," she said. She cited the economic crunch as the culprit.

But Ramsey said that she feels people are sympathetic with what the young women are trying to accomplish.

"It makes me feel good to know people really appreciate what you're doing," she said.

Contestants have until Feb. 25 to raise as much money as they can. An incentive was offered: The first three girls to raise $500 were each given a $50 savings bond. Neither Bowman nor Ramsey were able to reach that goal, however.

Ramsey said that while her main reason of competing is to aid the Heart association, "The prizes are a big incentive, also."

The winner will receive, among other items, a trip for two to the Bahamas courtesy of Eastern Airlines and Princess Hotels. Also included are a modeling scholarship, jewelry, theater tickets and season tickets to (what else?) Blues hockey games.

For her part of the bargain, Miss St. Louis Blues will be expected to make appearances throughout the year at different social functions, parades, and Heart Association events.

What happens if the St. Louis Blues become the Saskatoon Blues?

"Of course they're hoping the team does stay in town," said Ramsey. "But if not, the title will change to Miss St. Louis Heart Association or something like that, and she'll carry out a lot of the same responsibilities."

Both Bowman and Ramsey agree that this is no beauty contest.

"Not at all," said Ramsey. "It's strictly raising money for the Heart Association."

"It's a challenge to see if you can reach your goals."

— Michele Bowman

FRIENDLY RIVALS: Michele Bowman (left) and Kathy Ramsey are competing for the title of "Miss St. Louis Blues." Both agree it's been a great experience, whether they win or not.

"I wouldn't go into it for a beauty contest," said Bowman. "At first I sort of felt like it was a beauty contest. At the first meeting, everyone was dressed to the tee. I felt that if I hadn't gone all out to look my best, I would have felt underrated."

"But now that I've met some of the girls, they all seem really nice," she added, "and it doesn't feel that way at all anymore."

Bowman said that she'll feel good whether she wins or loses. "I'll still be proud of myself either way," she said. "I've met so many people and it's been such a good experience. I've had a great time doing it."

Ramsey agreed. "If I win, I'll be excited. I'll feel like I really worked hard for it. And if I lose, I'll still feel good about it. It's a great challenge."

GIVE 'EM A SMILE: UMSL senior Kathy Ramsey talks a hockey game-goer into donating to the St. Louis Heart Association. Each dollar she collects is a vote for her.

BOWMAN SINGS THE BLUES: Michele Bowman mingles with the crowd at a recent Blues game, soliciting donations. The 23-year-old university employee will learn if she's won on March 1.

Critic offers tids, tads of trivia

St. Louis is a relatively isolated town. We get virtually everything late. Fashion, film, music — you name it, we get it after everyone else is done with it.

I'm a film fanatic, so Los Angeles and New York City are two of my favorite places. However, whenever I visit either coast people ask me the same questions. They want to know where St. Louis is. I inform them as politely as possible that St. Louis is in Missouri. They then ask me where Missouri is. I tell them that Missouri is on the Iberian Peninsula. People in New York and California don't seem to believe that any place exists other than New York and California.

What follows are various tids and tads of film industry trivia. There are no juicy little sensationalistic bits of moviestar gossip, though; you'll have to read one of our two major papers to get that sort of thing.

With the material below you should be able to dazzle friends, impress prospective employers and feel more secure in the knowledge that you possess the same inside information as your aunt in L.A.

A SMIDGE OF HISTORY

Any self-respecting college student with a taste for sophisticated British comedy is familiar with the chaps from Monty Python. But how many know when Monty Python began?

After years of seeing their routines used by others, writers Graham Chapman, Eric Idle, John Cleese, Terry Jones and Michael Palin decided to create their own program for the British Broadcasting Corp. Upon enlisting American animator Terry Gilliam, the group proceeded to produce 45 half-hour episodes of "Monty Python's Flying Circus" between 1969 and 1974.

The group's first movie venture was titled "And Now for Something Completely Different" and was designed to introduce the Python crew to regions of the world where they were unknown — particularly the United States. It was not, however, until early Python albums began receiving FM airplay that the Public Broadcasting Service chose to air the "Flying Circus" in October 1974.

Between 1975 and 1980, the members of Monty Python released "Monty Python and the Holy Grail," "Monty Python's Life of Brian," four best-selling books and 11 record albums.

As many are already aware, this final season of "M*A*S*H" marks its 11th year on television. In its first 10 years, the remarkable series received 99 Emmy nominations and captured nearly every award one program can possibly win, including the coveted Current Golden Kuchno Award.

"M*A*S*H" is seen regularly in the Far East, Australia, Europe and South America. It will be missed.

ALMOST OF INTEREST

Did you realize that . . .

Columbia Pictures is a subsidiary of the Coca-Cola Co., CBS Inc.

HBO Inc. is a subsidiary of Time Inc.

Jerry Lewis films nearly always do well in France.

John Huston's "Annie" is breaking box-office records in South Africa.

BEHIND THE MOVIE

Ever wonder what really goes into the production of a film? Ever wonder what difficulties directors and actors have working with one another? Ever wonder just what makes a hit movie? Well, frankly, I haven't the foggiest. Nonetheless, after minutes of painstaking research I have compiled some intriguing data regarding the following newly released pictures:

film

Steve Klearman

"Eating Raoul," a film that is being touted as "a fable for the Age of Reagan," is one of the few low-budget works to make it to the screen in recent years. It was filmed one weekend at a time. Cast and crew performed for much less than their normal salaries. In fact, it is the only movie in screen history to list a credit for a "guest electrician."

What's the film about? Well, according to Paul Bartel (director-writer-actor), the movie touches upon quite a few things: "the perversion of middle-class values, the resurgence of Nixonism, Latin machismo versus WASP fastidiousness, film noir" — all this for the price of a ticket.

The late Rainer Werner Fassbinder's "Veronika Voss" is the last film of a trilogy "on the economic miracle of postwar Germany in the 1950s." Fassbinder said that he intended the film to convey the conditions that led "to the abnormality of terrorism that arose in the '60s."

The inspiration for the central character in the film is Sybille Shmitz. Fassbinder claimed that he had wanted to give Shmitz — who has been called the German Garbo — a role in one of his films, but discovered that she was dead.

Director Walter Hill's new film, "48 Hours," one of the most exciting Christmas releases, deserves recognition for being one of the few Hollywood films in recent history to make major use of black talent. In addition to Eddie Murphy (the 21-year-old star of "Saturday Night Live"), the picture features Frank McRae, Olivia Brown, Gloria Gifford, Jon St. Elwood, Clint Smith and Angela Robinson among others, plus the six-man group, The Bus Boys, as well as almost 200 black background players.

In 1962, actor-producer Richard Attenborough received a phone call from somebody claiming to be with the Indian High Commission in London. The man's name was Motilal Kothari. He knew nothing about filmmaking, but he wanted the world to know more about Mahatma Gandhi. Attenborough wasn't really interested in doing a film on Gandhi, but soon changed his mind. He was persuaded by something Gandhi had observed as a victim of racial discrimination: "It has always been a mystery to me how men can feel themselves honored by the humiliation of their fellow beings."

SOON TO BE SEEN

Slated for release in America is "We of the Never Never," adapted by Peter Schreck from Aneas Gunn's 1908 memoirs. This is the true story of the first white woman to travel into the Australian wilderness known as the Never Never.

Currently being filmed is "The Survivors," starring Robin Williams, Walter Matthau and Jerry Reed. William Sackheim produces and Michael Ritchie directs from a screenplay by Michael Leeson.

Scheduled to be broadcast in May is "Blood Feud" on Operation Prime Time stations across the country. Robert Blake has been signed to star in this four-hour mini-series depicting the conflict between Jimmy Hoffa and Robert F. Kennedy.

"Trenchcoat," a comedy-mystery shot almost entirely on the island of Malta, is set to open in St. Louis March 11. Margot Kidder and Robert Hays star. Michael Tuchner directs.

FAMILIAR FACES: I dug deeply into my film critic's collection of rare photographs and came up with this. Do you know these actors? Do you know who is still acting? I do.

Sex on campus? Let's get recognition

Chivalry is not dead. It is alive and well and living in the Current offices.

While browsing through the last few years of Playboy magazine (for the articles, of course) I have noticed a trend in the magazine toward sex on the college campus. They analyze it, photograph it, survey it and sometimes even instigate it. Recently they went so far as to rate it. That's right. They picked 20 of the top sexual schools in the country and rated them on men, women, local bars and sexual attitudes, among other things. This was all very interesting to read but something in all of this campus reverie was lacking. Finally, after much thought, I figured it out.

UMSL was missing. In all of these charts, surveys, pictorials and columns there was not one mention of the University of Missouri at St. Louis. They mention UCLA and Indiana and SIU. My God, they even mention Mizzou. But nowhere do they write of sex here at UMSL. I couldn't understand it. I decided to find out why.

So I called Playboy. No, really. I really called them. The number is 312-751-8000. That's Playboy Enterprises in Chicago. When I asked to speak to Christie Hefner they politely refused — claimed she was out of town. Then I pulled my trump card. "I'm from the University of Missouri at St. Louis," I cried. After she hung up I called again and lowered my indignation level, explaining the purpose of my call. I was told that someone would get back to me. Sure enough a call came in to the paper offices from Dan Sheridan, vice-president (or something) in charge of promotions (or something).

I wasted no time in taking up our gauntlet. "Dan," I said, "Something is terribly wrong here. Not once have you mentioned UMSL in your sex-on-campus articles or pictorials."

"Well," said Dan, "are you sure that there is sex at UMSL?" Now this threw me for a loop. I thought for a minute before answering. "Well Dan, I'm pretty sure there is; otherwise why would we have all those 'Are You Pregnant?' ads in our school newspaper?" Dan agreed that this was pretty convincing proof. His next question though, got me to thinking. "Did you ever think then that something might be wrong with the sex at UMSL?"

Something wrong? I wondered. I decided to do some research on my own. The first thing I did was try and solicit 20 UMSL coeds for a hands-on sex survey. Surprisingly the only response I got was "Get your hands off of me." I was crushed but not discouraged.

refractions

By Gary Belsky

Next came my informal sex questionnaire. I asked 100 random UMSL students (that was easy as all UMSL students are random) if they thought that there was promiscuous sex here at UMSL. 63 people said unfortunately no, 20 people said not in any of their classes, 10 people thought I said "sects" and started chanting Hare Krishna and seven business majors wanted to know what promiscuous meant.

When I tried to interview the Greeks (frats and sorts?) about incest here at UMSL, I didn't have much success either, as they would not let me in to the Friends of Oedipus (Jennings Branch) weekly meeting.

Discouraged, I started thinking that maybe Dan was right. I called him back and told him so. He was very comforting. He also informed me of one way to get UMSL into Playboy.

Okay, this is serious. Sheridan agreed that if I could supply a playmate from the UMSL campus for the magazine, he would agree to get the university's name into the accompanying article. It is beyond me how any proud UMSL student could pass up the opportunity to put our school on the pornographic map (or at least to earn $12,000). Here at the Current offices three of the staffers have already volunteered their bodies for school spirit. It warms my heart.

It's a shame none of them were women.

European travel requires much preparation

Marty Klug
reporter

[Editor's note: This is the second article of a two-part series.]

A French patio restaurant. A fine red wine. A beautiful, postcard sunset. It's a dream summer vacation come true, only your luggage is lost somewhere in Swaziland and your bilingual dictionary is missing. European travel poses unique challenges to college students wanting to see the Old World on their own.

Package tours arrange such amenities. They even encourage students to see Europe on their own by providing ample free time and making many special events optional. Yet package tours account for less than half of all British travel. Many students are opting for custom and self-arranged tours, which provide greater privacy and personal arrangements for the dream vacation that doesn't include 40 other travelers joining in the fun.

CUSTOM TOURS

Custom tours provide personalized itineraries arranged by experienced travel representatives.

"We can plan and execute for you a visit built around any [interest] you may dream up," stated Betty Garretson, president of InnerBritain. For under $200, InnerBritain will plan a monthlong vacation around specific interests in pub games, psychical research, vineyards and other areas. A free brochure is available from InnerBritain Inc., 3445 Wedgewood Road S.W., Roanoke, Va., 24015.

National and local travel agents are eager to assist students, making arrangements for wide-ranging prices.

SELF-ARRANGED TOURS

Self-arranged tours provide the greatest individual freedom at the least expense — sometimes. Avoiding agency commissions, however, also may avoid services and group discounts which those agencies provide. Students without travel reps should carefully make their own arrangements for identification, transportation, shelter and Customs.

Getting Ready

Travelers need several documents.

Passports are issued by the U.S. State Department and show a person's identity and nationality. Passport applications are available at a county court house, U.S. passport agencies or any designated post office and take four to six weeks to process. The Immigration and Nationality Act prohibits any U.S. citizen from entering or leaving the United States without a valid passport.

On Jan. 1, the life of a new passport doubled from five to 10 years and the registration fee increased from $10 to $42. For people under 18, passports cost $20 and are good for only five years.

If lost, passports may be replaced for a fee at U.S. consulates or embassies. Replacement may require several hours or days depending upon available identification.

Visas are issued by foreign consulates located in the United States and give a host country's temporary permission (from a few days up to a year) for a person to travel. While nearly 60 percent of countries require visas, they are not needed in Western Europe for less than three months of travel.

Some countries may be strict on visitors they allow. Costa Rica prohibits bearded travelers, the Dominican Republic refuses entry to Hare Krishna followers, and Tanzania bans women wearing tight trousers.

Tourist cards are issued by airlines that serve the country the traveler is visiting and, like visas, offer temporary permission to travel. They are not required in Western Europe.

International certificates of vaccination are issued by local health departments and state a person has been vaccinated for smallpox, yellow fever and cholera. Western Europe does not require certificates unless one is arriving from an infected country.

The Airline Deregulation Act of 1978 has sharply increased airline competition. Seventy-two percent of tickets sold in the United States are discounted, reported Travel Holiday. It pays to compare prices. A standby flight between New York and London in 1979 was more than $1,100 cheaper than first-class travel. Discount fares such as Excursion, APEX (advance purchase excursion) and Super APEX may require minimum stays, advance ticket purchases and cancellation penalties, but provide substantial savings.

World Travel International offers a Super APEX St. Louis-London roundtrip flight this summer at $699, down from $829. Off-season rates (not from June 1 to Sept. 14) are even cheaper, according to Dave Thomas of WTI. Thomas Holiday and Skytrain Holidays have slashed prices. Industrywide, an 8 percent fare increase expected this February has been postponed indefinitely.

What happens if you get to Paris to wine and dine but your luggage doesn't? Promptly complete a Property Irregularity Report at the airlines' baggage service desk before your hors d'oeuvres. Most airlines will forward lost luggage free when it arrives.

If it never arrives, airlines are liable for $9.08 per pound for checked baggage and up to $400 per passenger for unchecked baggage. Excess-value charges increase airline liability if the airline is at fault. Baggage insurance, on the other hand, offers no-fault protection. In any event, claimants must prove value of lost possessions and may receive only depreciated value, not actual replacement costs.

Transatlantic baggage allowances are 66 pounds for first class and 44 pounds for all other classes, with no single piece exceeding 70 pounds. Intraeurope baggage limits, however, are only 33 pounds, notes the "NY Times Guide to Student Adventures and Studies Abroad." Passengers may also carry on one or more packages provided it can fit under the seat.

Getting Around

In Europe travel may vary—rail, bus, car or thumb.

Eurailpass offers unlimited rail travel in 16 European countries. For adults over 26, a 15-day pass is $260 and a 30-day pass is $410. Youth railpasses for people under 26 are $290 for one month, and $370 for two months. Eurailpasses are available from most travel agents.

Eurobus passes may be available in some areas, though rail is the chief public transport.

Renting a car may require an international driving permit and a "green card." International driving permits translate information from U.S. licenses into several different languages. While many countries will recognize a valid U.S. driver's license, international driving permits may simplify car rentals.

Green cards are issued by American insurance companies and signify foreign coverage. Most policies exclude coverage beyond U.S. borders. Western European countries require liability insurance for U.S. drivers and will include it with car rental fees, though additional coverage may be advisable.

Sometimes car rental services increase their rates for drivers under age 25 to pay for more expensive coverage. Even renting a car may be difficult since the minimum age for renters varies from 18 to 25.

Renting Le Car in Paris for 30 days costs over $600, reported Rolling Stone. One-week car rentals with unlimited mileage in London range from $128 for a Ford Fiesta Popular to $672 for a Jaguar XJ. Foremost Euro-Car offers a free brochure at 5340 Van Nuys Blvd., Van Nuys, Calif. 91401.

Getting A Room

Running for the nearest Hilton may be convenient, but not always the most affordable. Youth and student hostels offer alternative shelter at discount prices.

American Youth Hostel cards allow travelers to use youth hostels—cabin or quasi-hotel shelters—in America or Europe for an average cost of $5 a night. Over 4,200 hostels exist worldwide. Restrictions concerning drinking, smoking and curfews may apply. Membership in American Youth Hostels for ages 18 to 59 is $14 from American Youth Hostels, 1332 I Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005.

Student Hostel Cards allow students to use inexpensive dorm or university housing with less restrictions and may be purchased for $6 from the Council on International Educational Exchange, 205 E. 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Getting Home

Whether going alone or with a group, travelers should be aware of U.S. Customs and smuggling laws.

Effective January 1983, tourists returning from abroad may bring back up to $600 worth of household or personal articles duty-free. This ruling doubles the $300 duty-free allowance established in November 1978. Articles exceeding the $600 limit, or purchased for resale, may be subject to customs duties from 2.5 to 75 percent.

Foreign-made articles should be registered with Customs before leaving the United States or they will be subject to duty when they re-enter the country. "How to Cope With U.S. Customs" advises travelers to keep all sales receipts.

Thinking of making a fortune smuggling? Think again. Customs officials may search a person or package without probable cause and frown on black marketeering, subversive material or illicit drugs.

Black marketeering includes any illegal transactions which exchange money for money, money for goods, goods for money or goods for goods. Selling new Levis for $200 in Red Square may result in a hefty profit. It may also result in interrogation, fines or imprisonment.

To discourage black marketeering, communist countries often require travelers to declare all foreign money and prohibit any domestic currency from entering or leaving their borders. Even Western Europe, which allows any amount of currency to enter, will restrict amounts of domestic currency which can leave. Any undeclared currency will be treated as smuggled and may be seized.

Eastern European Customs discourage any subversive material entering their borders. Saul Miller in "Super Traveler" advises tourists not to enter Russia with Bibles, and warns Russian Customs will confiscate Solzhenitsyn novels, Zap comics and even Carlos Castaneda books.

Overseas drug laws are severe and rarely discriminate between "hard" or "soft" drugs whether for personal or retail use. Three out of four Americans imprisoned abroad are incarcerated under drug charges. U.S. consulates may provide limited assistance, however, travelers are subject to local laws.

Making your own travel arrangements can let you see Europe the way you always wanted—spending your time and money only on the things you want to see. With poor planning, it can also let you see Europe the way you never wanted—lonely, stranded and destitute.

While package tours have medium ranged prices, self-arranged tours can be cheaper or considerably more expensive. If package itineraries seem limiting, self-arranged tours may offer an inexpensive alternative

DYNAMIC DUO: Southwick and Stevenson entertained the evening students in the Underground last Wednesday as part of a trial run.

Musical program entertains UMSL's evening students

Patrons of the Underground got an added treat last Wednesday evening as they dined and studied. The musical duo of Southwick and Stevenson performed from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. as part of a trial program sponsored by the University Program Board.

The new program is designed specifically for the benefit of evening students, according to Curt Watts, assistant director of the University Center.

"We are often criticized for not doing enough for evening students," Watts said.

The program would resemble the "Wednesday Noon Live" series which has proved successful since its inception nearly four years ago. According to Watts, however, a different type of programming from that of the daytime music series would be provided.

"Evening students tend to be older, and the 'Noon Live' material might not be their cup of tea," Watts explained. "That's why we thought we'd go more for the coffee-house type performer."

Watts added that he wasn't disappointed nor was he overjoyed with the response of the crowd last Wednesday. He said that the program was something that students probably would catch on to gradually. And he stressed that the program was on a trial basis.

"We'll try it a couple more times," he said. "If attendance picks up or we receive some positive feedback, we'll continue it."

SWAP job fair to offer career opportunities

The Career Planning and Placement Office will present a three-day employment fair beginning Tuesday, Feb. 22.

The fair, titled "Triple Play," will begin with a session called "Who Gets Hired and Why" on Feb. 22, noon to 2 p.m. in the J.C. Penney Auditorium. St. Louis executives will share their insight on resumes, cover letters and applications; interviews; education, grades and work experience; dress, attitude and communication skills; and part-time employment.

The event will continue Wednesday, Feb. 23, with a session on summer camps from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the University Center lobby and lounge. Representatives from about 45 summer camps will discuss employment opportunities with students interested in this type of work.

Business and industry will be represented Thursday, Feb. 24, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the University Center. Student applicants for non-degree full-time and part-time permanent or summer jobs will meet with representatives from more than 40 St. Louis companies.

The job fair, an annual event, is sponsored by the Student Work Assignment Program. More than 600 UMSL students attended a similar one-day fair last year.

With Jagger at center stage, film presents Stones in fine form

When the Rolling Stones came to St. Louis in the fall of 1981, it was the biggest thing since God invented the Sony Walkman.

But me, I just wasn't caught up in all the excitement.

Sure, the Stones are one of the world's best, and certainly most long-lasting, rock and roll bands. They are experts in their mode; their rough, driving, and still quite catchy pop has always been impressive.

But the Jovan-Stones tour (read that sarcastically) just seemed to reek with crass commercialism. The Stones, to me, seemed old; I just didn't care about them.

It has become clear, lately, though, that just because a band makes lots and lots of money doesn't necessarily mean it cannot produce worthwhile music.

It's with a more or less positive attitude, then, that I approach the Stones' new concert movie "Let's Spend the Night Together."

The Hal Ashby film starts somewhat slow; it becomes clear that the music, the band, and especially Mick Jagger are going to take center stage.

This quite minimalistic approach could have become incredibly boring, but Ashby does his best to pull it off.

Jagger's obligatory posturings, however, seem strange on film. They must have been great in the Arizona State University stadium; on the screen, however, Jagger approaches and, as a matter of fact, goes far beyond self-parody.

Ashby's direction eventually tries to take advantage of the post-modern stage and, occasionally, the sellout crowd, but things are spaced too far apart in the stadium for this to work effectively.

But once the outdoor Arizona State starts to get boring, the film makes a welcome shift of venue to the Meadowlands Arena in New Jersey, near New York City.

The film becomes more visually interesting as Ashby feels free to splice in historic film clips, including scenes from the old "Ed Sullivan Show." The band is closer together, allowing for much more interesting cinematography.

music

by Frank Russell

But this is a music column, and that should be our primary concern. It's hard to make a fair judgment because the sound wasn't loud enough at the screening I attended. I suppose the manager of the Crestwood Theatre didn't want to disturb the patrons seeing "Sophie's Choice" next door. Such is the nature of life in a multiplex world.

Even so, the sound was at enough of a barely tolerable volume to demonstrate that this was a band in fine form. The Stones played their '60s classics, as well as newer efforts, with energy and finesse.

But to actually pay money to see "Let's Spend the Night Together"?

Unlike actually going to a Stones concert, this film in no way captures the event status. The viewer often feels detached from all the excitement.

And though the film is interesting enough, it's pot luck as far as good sound quality goes.

Under ideal theater environment conditions, "Let's Spend the Night Together" is well worth seeing. For the music, however, why not buy the inevitable soundtrack album instead?

Swimmers point to next season

Dan Kimack
assistant sports editor

Following a dismal, mundane season the UMSL swimmers participated in their final meet of the season last weekend. The finsters hosted the Washington University Bears and St. Louis University for the St. Louis Area Athletic Collegiate Association's annual tri-meet—a meet providing its victor bragging rights to the St. Louis area swimming championships.

But you don't hear any of the UMSL swimmers doing any bragging. As it has been throughout the course of the season, UMSL came out on the short end of things, again.

In the three-team competition, both the UMSL men's and women's squads finished in the tournament cellar. Washington U. won the men's competition with 166 points, followed by SLU's 133 and UMSL's 115. SLU won the men's counterpart as the women Billikens totaled 190 points, followed by Washington U. and UMSL with 178 and 142 points, respectively.

In actuality, SLU dominated the tri-meet, winning many of the men's events, and almost all of the women's events. Washington U. proved competitive, placing second and third in many of the events. The UMSL men's teams, which after the first day of competition found itself in second place, also proved competitive as four of the six men swimmers took top honors in different events.

"We shouldn't have even had a chance to be in second place after Friday's competition," said Bob Chitwood. "We only had six guys, but we think we are the baddest six swimmers in the area."

As for individual UMSL men winners, John Wilson took first place in the 50-yard freestyle, Chitwood finished in the top spot winning the 100-yard backstroke, and Bob Swain won the one- and three-meter diving events. In three-meter diving, Swain tallied 439.9 points during the two-day competition, qualifying him for the NCAA division 2 national competition. he needed 420 points in either the one- or three-meter diving events to qualify, and as

Washington University swimming coach Martha Tillman said, "I think he missed the one-meter diving totals by three points; it's really a shame."

The UMSL women swimmers, however, didn't win a single first place. "We didn't even think about winning," said Theresa Eppert. "We knew we didn't have a chance; we did really bad. It was a bad season."

And so, with the final meet of the season over, the UMSL swimmers can look forward to next year. This year, obviously, would rather be forgotten. The men finished with a record of 2-6, and the women rounded things out with their sixth loss of the year, as compared to only one victory. In the beginning, though, Coach Greg Conway was hoping to better the men's record of 7-3 from last year, and his goal for the women was to win two meets. Both of these goals were unaccomplished.

Yes, all in all it was a bad season for the UMSL swimming program. The swimmers were few in number, and according to Eppert, "The coaching was really bad, too. Greg just wasn't into it this year. It really hurts me because this is my last year. All of the other swimmers can look forward to next year, but I can't."

All of the women swimmers are expected to return next year, except for Eppert, and many of the men are hopeful returnees also. Head coach Conway will not return, however, as he submitted his resignation earlier in the season.

"I'm looking forward to next year," Chitwood said. "Many of the juniors will be back and a lot of new, good swimmers are going to join the team."

Chitwood added, "We were disappointed with our season this year, but that makes us all the hungrier for next year."

Next year. That's what the UMSL swimming season has come down to. After a season they would rather forget, there isn't much else. Maybe the future will prove better for the swimmers as a new coach will take over, a greater number of swimmers will be participating, and hopefully a better attitude will be present around the UMSL pool.

Rivermen tumble in MIAA

reporter

The 1976 NBA championship series between Boston and Phoenix was one of the most memorable in the history of the association. But, the one game that will go down as the most exciting was Game 5 in Boston. In the fourth quarter, Phoenix trailed by 10 points with 2 minutes to go, but rallied to send the game into overtime. Boston came away victorious, however, in a triple-overtime thriller.

That game was replayed last Wednesday night. But instead of Boston and Phoenix, the teams were the UMSL Rivermen and the Northeast Missouri State University Bulldogs. Northeast totally dominated the first half, opening up a 15-point lead. But, the Rivermen came back strong, taking a six-point lead with 1 minute, 30 seconds left to play. Then, the Rivermen's old problems (turnovers and free throws) came back to haunt them. NEMO tied the game and sent it into overtime.

Now, back to Boston. The most memorable moment of that game came in the second overtime period. Boston held a two-point lead with three seconds left. Phoenix inbounded the ball and a forward named Garfield Heard grabbed it, 35 feet away from the basket. Heard sent up a desperation shot that swished through the basket just as the buzzer went off.

Now, let's switch the scene back to Kirkville. UMSL controlled the opening tipoff of the first overtime period and went into a stall. Their plan was to hold the ball for the entire five minutes and then get off a hopeful shot. The Rivermen held the ball for the first 4 minutes, 56 seconds of the period. Then, Carlos Smith put up a jump shot that went in. UMSL was up by two. NEMO quickly called a time-out with two seconds left. Then... well, let coach Rich Meckfessel explain what happened.

"They've got the ball and they've got to go 94 feet. They threw a long pass and the guy (who caught the ball) just turned around and threw the ball at the basket and it went in."

So, onto the second overtime period. The Rivermen played tough but missed two critical shots. But the game was still tied.

In the third overtime period, the Bulldogs grabbed an advantage and won the game, 78-76.

Despite the loss, the Rivermen turned out some excellent individual performances. Smith showed off his scoring ability by tossing in a game-high 34 points. Also, Ron Porter played another outstanding game, pulling down 12 rebounds.

On Saturday night, the Rivermen traveled to Warrensburg to face the Central Missouri State University Mules, who were ranked 12th nationally in National Collegiate Athletic Association Division 2 and a 14-4 record. This was a revenge game for the Mules: they had lost to UMSL, 67-55, earlier in the season. The game was even for most of the first half. Then, with 4 minutes, 30 seconds to go in the half, CMSU went on a scoring spree that lasted 4½ into the second half. During that span, the Rivermen were outscored by 16 points. But, the Rivermen fought back again. With less than a minute to go, they trailed by only two points. But in an effort to

Ex-UMSL cagers reunited for game

Curt Melchior

Does history repeat itself? Can lightning strike twice? The answers to these questions, as well as others, will be apparent on Saturday night, Feb. 12, as numerous Rivermen from yesteryear return to the Mark Twain gymnasium.

Twenty ex-Rivermen who performed from 1966 to 1982 will return for this annual alumni contest. Some have been away from UMSL for only a short time, while others have not laced up their sneakers for a decade.

The returning stars include Steve Novak (1966-67), Clarence Slaughter (1967-71), Verle Sutton (1968-70), Steve Meier (1968-69), Greg Daust (1968-71), Jim Buford (1970-72), Jim Peleck (1972-75), Jim Goessling (1973-77), Dale Hoette (1974-75), Dave Watkins (1974-78), Hubert Hoosman (1975-79), Brad Scheiter (1977-81), Rick Kirby (1978-80), William Harris (1978-82), Gary Rucks (1979-81), Glen "Doody" Rohn (1968-72), Rolandis Nash (1974-78), and Francis Goellner (1970-72). Rivermen who will return to help guide these ex-stars are Chuck Hinson (1968-70) and Terry Reiter (1966-68).

UMSL Athletic Director Chuck Smith had these thoughts on the contest. "We are always interested in alumni relations. With an alumni basketball game the alumni can see how our new staff is doing, how the new players are doing and what is going on with the present-day team."

Remember that Saturday night, Feb. 12, is the date. The place is the Mark Twain gymnasium and the event is Alumni Night. The players may be from the past but don't pass up the chance to see these athletes in action just one more time.

Women look for cure to woes

Kurt Jacob
reporter

In a year when things are going bad, it would be easy for the person in charge to give up hope, make excuses, or just quit his job. Such is not the case with UMSL womens' basketball coach Mike Larson.

Larson's team has gone into a dreadful slump after performing somewhat impressively early in the season. The Riverwomen have lost four in a row as their league record has dropped to a sixth place, 1-6. But Larson and his team are not giving up.

"We still have a shot at finishing in the top four," Larson said. "We win four of our last five [league] games and we've got a good chance of getting in the playoffs."

Last week, UMSL was unsuccessful in two tough road contests as it found defeat at the hands of Northeast Missouri State University and Central Missouri State University.

At NEMO, an uninspired UMSL team allowed the host Bulldogs to get a fast start. UMSL was leading 8-4 when NEMO went on a 23-8 spurt enroute to a 39-25 halftime lead.

In the second half, UMSL played with more intensity and, as a result, got back in the game. Sandy Moore's seven straight points brought UMSL to within two with 10 minutes 25 seconds remaining. But the Bulldogs rattled off six quick points and never were seriously threatened again as they wound up with a 78-66 decision.

Moore led UMSL with 16 points and seven rebounds while Deb Skerik and Chris Meier poured in 11 and 10 points respectively.

On Saturday night, Larson and Company traveled to Warrensburg, Mo., to take on the highly-ranked Jennies of Central Missouri State University. CMSU currently is ranked fourth in the Division 2 national polls.

Despite the supposed difference in talent, the Riverwomen stayed close to the Jennies and with 5½ minutes left in the first half, CMSU held a slim six-point lead. But UMSL hit a dry spell, committed a few quick turnovers and at the half, trailed by 14.

UMSL stayed even with Central in the second half but couldn't gain ground as the Jennies prevailed in the long run, 80-62.

"We were up for this game," Larson said. "We came out fired up and played them tough."

"We always play Central relatively close and with the exception of a few minutes late in the first half Saturday night, we played them close."

"Our bench play was good too," he added. "Ellie [Schmink], Kandy [Stickrod], and Georgia [Hinson] gave us a big lift."

Moore again led the Riverwomen with 22 points and seven

Basketball in full swing

Last week marked a spot in the hearts of St. Louis basketball lovers. Over 19,000 fans saw the Kansas City Kings host the Los Angeles Lakers. With the possible sale of the St. Louis Blues to Saskatchewan, Laskatchewan, many loyal fans are talking about the possibility of a pro basketball team coming to St. Louis. This is just a rumor, though, so for now those fans will have to be content with the next best thing — UMSL intramural basketball.

Both intramural leagues are starting their second week of play. In the day league, Tuesday division, the Keggers and Devastation are tied for first with 2-0 records. Following closely behind them are the Shorts, who are 1-0. Behind them come ROTC-1 (1-1), the Big Dogs (0-1), the Deans (0-2) and the Beach Bums (0-2).

Tuesday's action included the Shorts downing ROTC-1

intramural report

58-47, the Keggers running over the Beach Bums 83-59, and Devastation knocking off the Deans 39-34.

In the Thursday afternoon league, the United Blacks, Biology Club, and Salt & Pepper are all tied for the lead at 1-0. In their wake come the Butchers, FUBAR, and the Papal Bulls, all of whom are at 0-1.

In last Thursday's action, United Blacks killed the Papal Bulls 67-21, the Biology Club downed FUBAR by 15, and Salt & Pepper got by the Butchers 50-43 in overtime.

Day games scheduled for next week are Tuesday, Big Dogs vs. Beach Bums, Shorts vs. Devastation, and the Keggers vs. the Deans; and today United Blacks vs. Butchers, FUBAR vs. Salt & Pepper, and Papal Bulls vs. Biology Club.

In the night league, FUBAR and the Icemen lead the A division with 1-0 records. Following them are the No Names (0-0), Sig Tau (0-1), Fighting Irish (0-1), and the Latecomers (0-1), who have replaced the Sig Tau's who in turn forfeited out.

The B division is lead by the Papal Bulls and Beta Alpha Psi, both 1-0. Behind them are the Baseball Rivermen (0-0), Optometry School (0-1), and Psychos (0-1). Last Tuesday's results are FUBAR over Fighting Irish 37-25, Icemen over Sig Tau by forfeit, Beta Alpha Psi over Optometry School 37-30, and Papal Bulls over Psychos 38-30. Games scheduled for Tuesday night were Fighting Irish vs. Icemen, No Names vs. Latecomers, Baseball Rivermen vs. Psychos, and Optometry School vs. Papal Bulls.

Intramural notes: An intramural racquetball tournament will begin Feb. 21. The deadline for entry is Feb. 18.

UMSL skaters in second; playoffs upcoming

Bob Chitwood
reporter

"We're the best in the league when we're not outnumbered," proclaimed UMSL defenseman Ken Whitbrodt. And last Thursday's 6-2 glide over St. Louis Collegiate Hockey League leader St. Louis University doesn't damper the proud Riverman's view.

It was exactly three weeks ago that UMSL last faced SLU. On that blustery night the Billikens suited up 18 players against the Rivermen 10. After an early lead and a gallant fight the Billikens just wore down their short-handed opposition. SLU scored four third period goals and stole the game 4-2. Last week things were different.

"We were finally in the same boat," Whitbrodt explained.

The reason both teams were in the same boat is that a majority of the SLU crew competed in last week's International Junior B hockey tournament at south county's Affton Ice Rink. Two of UMSL's leading scorers, Jim Demos and Bill Karides, also were skating in the tourney for their Junior B clubs. As a result the tally of skaters playing in the Billiken - Rivermen battle read UMSL 8; SLU 8. Even. That's a ratio that Rivermen physical defenseman Eric Amundson likes.

"When we have all our players, we're as good as anyone in this league. If they say they're better, we'll just have to prove them wrong." Against SLU they proved it.

In the first period the Rivermen attacked the Billikens like ants at a picnic. UMSL right winger Chris Sprague struck first just three minutes into the contest on a feed from center Jim Wilhelm. Thirty-seven seconds later Sprague returned the favor. Wilhelm found the back of the Billiken net on assists from Sprague and winger Craig Gulley to take a 2-0 lead.

Gulley earned his second assist of four for the night when he passed to left winger Rick Peterson who scored midway into the period. Wilhelm closed out the red and gold barrage with

League Standings

	W	L	T	PTS

UMSL	8	5	0	16
Meramec	7	5	1	15
Parks	0	13	0	0

his second goal, giving UMSL a comfortable 4-1 lead.

As it turned out, UMSL's first period output was more than enough to collect the victory. The Billikens are a skating, finesse team. Their offense calls for sneaking a center or a wing behind the opposition's defense to gain a quick breakaway or a two-on-one opportunity. Defenseman Whitbrodt knew this Billiken goal equation and he had the UMSL answer.

"We make sure that everyone comes back to help out," he said. "Our first priority is to keep the puck out of our end and into theirs." Good idea, the philosophy being that it is much easier to stop a long slap shot than defending a five-foot crib shot.

SLU managed only one more goal over the final two periods and the Rivermen added two insurance goals to bring the final total to 6-2. It was a satisfying win for the several home-team puckhandlers.

Sprague went home with two goals and one assist. Wilhelm, who Amundson says "kicked butt," scored two goals and passed out two assists. Right winger Gulley offered more helping hands than a Boy Scout. The unselfish winger dished out four assists to his explosive teammates.

Amundson was pleased with the victory. "We played pretty well," said Amundson, because "we knew we had to win. We have guys who like to win." Lately winning has been a common companion to the Rivermen.

Since the SLU defeat three weeks ago the hockey team has rebounded with three consecutive wins over St. Louis Community College at Meramec, Parks College, and finally the Billikens. The skaters are gaining momentum for the St. Louis Collegiate Hockey League playoffs that begin Thursday, Feb. 17.

The playoff format calls for the first-place team to face the fourth-place team, and the second-place finisher to meet the third runner-up. The Billikens are this inaugural campaign's regular season champs. The Bills are untouchable with 21 points. The league doormat belongs to Parks which is 0-13. Second and third place are up for grabs. UMSL leads Meramec in that race with 16 points to Meramec's 15.

The second-place occupant will be decided tonight when the Rivermen meet the Warriors in an 8:45 p.m. contest.

Even though the UMSL red and gold can't capture first place, the Meramec duel promises to be a hot affair. The difference between second and third place is "a matter of pride" according to Amundson. And hopefully that pride will carry these stickhandlers right through the playoffs.

Rivermen

get the ball back, the Rivermen had to foul someone. That someone turned out to be the Mules' star guard, Brian Pesko. Pesko made 12 of 15 free throws and finished the game with 20 points to lead the Mules to victory, 73-66.

Porter led the Rivermen with 17 points. He also led the team with 17 rebounds. Meckfessel said that Porter "is getting better every game. He's starting to learn the college game. He's really coming along."

He also said that the team's biggest problem right now is shooting. "We'll have one player who will shoot well one night and one player who won't and then, the next night that'll be turned around. We shot 38 percent (against Central Missouri) and then we shot in the low 40's (percent-wise) against Northeast. In college basketball today, you've got to shoot 48 or 49 percent if you're going to win."

UMSL notes: The Rivermen's rebounds and Sandy Moriarty, who has played really well since the Christmas break, had 10 points, five rebounds, five assists and four blocked shots.

record is now 9-11, with a conference record of 2-5. UMSL played the University of Missouri-Rolla last night at the Mark Twain Building. Freshman forward Ron Porter has collected 43 rebounds in his last three games. The Rivermen play again Saturday, Feb. 12, at home against Quincy College. Tipoff time is 8 p.m.

"She has helped us immensely. She does a lot of good things on the court that don't show up in the stats."

So the Riverwomen are in their home stretch and need to start their run right away. They couldn't have picked a better team to start against than Rolla - a team that UMSL defeated by 21 earlier this season.

"We're going to come out pressing them and make them handle the ball," Larson said. "They're a tall, slow team and I think we can force them into making turnovers."

As you can probably tell, Larson still has a lot of hope.

"We're not giving up on this season," Larson said. "I'm not going to look to next year yet, we still have this year to worry about."

"We're just going to work hard and take one game at a time and hope we come out on the winning end."

EXPONENTIAL, MY DEAR WATSON

ACADEMIA
YEAR<sup>2</sup>

If you have at least two years of graduate or undergraduate education ahead, and you keep getting clues that your money is running short, then a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship may be the solution. Currently we're seeking young men and women who would like to serve their nation as Air Force Officers. Consequently, if you're majoring in a selected, technical/non-technical, scientific, nursing, or pre-medical field, or can qualify for pilot, navigator, or missile training, then you may be eligible for a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship. The scholarship pays your tuition, lab fees, (plus incidental fees), books, and $100 per month tax free. And even if you don't qualify for the two-year scholarship, you still receive the $100 a month while enrolled in the Air Force ROTC two-year program.

What do we ask in return? That you serve America at least four years as an Air Force officer. Your Air Force ROTC counselor has the details and qualification requirements. Check it out. It might even make your education finances seem elementary.
