Campus Announces $17 Million Plan

by Steven L. Brawley
editor

After months of planning, the Chancellor has announced a five-year program that will address the needs of the St. Louis region and coordinate the University's annual budget requests.

Last Friday, Chancellor Marguerite Ross Barnett presented the plan to University officials at a budget hearing held on campus.

The five year plan proposes a wide variety of new programs and support services for the campus at a cost of $17.5 million.

Barnett said the plan will be updated on an annual basis.

"By being prepared each January, the five year plan will be the key guide for the campus annual request for state funding and for its proposed changes in the University of Missouri Long Range Plan," Barnett said.

The $17.5 million in funds for the plan will come from a variety of sources.

These sources include:

—$3 million in estimated revenues from expanded teaching, research and service programs.

—$2 million from shifts in the campus budget over a five year period.

—Private sources.

—$10 million from new state appropriations.

The campus has an annual budget of $50 million. Barnett said the increase in funding for the five year plan is substantiated.

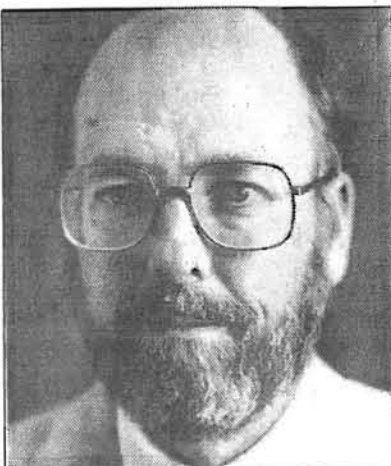

"It is our hope that, over the next few years, the University of Missouri-St. Louis can begin to put together the pieces that will allow the future leaders of St. Louis and the state of Missouri to enter a 21st century prepared, educated and ready to continue and enhance the work of the leaders who have come before them," Barnett said.

The new plan was developed by the new Office of Budgeting, Planning, and Institutional Research directed by E. Terrence Jones.

The main theme of the program comes from the Chancellor's three part Partnerships for Progress Program.

PLANNER: Special Assistant to the Chancellor Terry Jones helped develop the five-year plan after extensive research. Jones has announced he will leave his post in the Chancellor's Office and return to his duties as Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences this summer.

Curators Approve Library Addition

by David S. Brown and Christopher A. Duggan of the Current staff

The $6.2 million extension of the Thomas Jefferson Library moved one step closer to a reality Tuesday when the Board of Curators approved the schematic plans for the addition at a meeting on the UMSL campus.

"We're very hopeful that we will be able to break ground in the spring of 1988," UMSL Chancellor Marguerite R. Barnett said.

According to Barnett, the 21-year-old library now contains more than twice the 250,000 volumes it was originally designed to hold.

According to Thomas Harvath, of the architectural firm of Ittner and Bowersox Inc., the library addition will be made up of three components: a new west wing, renovation of the main level and a circular staircase to connect levels four and five to level three (the main level).

The new wing will have two stories and will be connected to the bottom levels. It will provide 33,700 square feet (about half the size of the present library) for study space and housing of books.

Barnett said that Governor John Ashcroft approved $2.16 million for the addition and said that UMSL must raise $1.2 million before he would approve the remaining $2.8 million.

Last November the University received a $500,000 grant from the

Protest Disrupts Curators' Meeting

Students protesting the University of Missouri's investments in companies that do business in South Africa entered the Board of Curators' meeting Tuesday and staged a demonstration.

They entered the meeting room carrying placards calling for divestment. However, within a few minutes their silent protest became verbal when they began shouting questions at the Curators.

The Curator's recessed their meeting while a demonstration was held.

At the board's request to continue the meeting, the group settled into a chant of "It's not right."

McDonnell Douglas Foundation and recently received $350,000 each from the Anheuser-Busch Foundation and the Emerson Electric Company, completing the $1.2 million goal.

The remaining $2.8 million is in the University's budget request and the Governor's budget request for the current legislative session.

In other business, the board reviewed the joint programs in law and dentistry between the UMSL and UMKC campuses.

Barnett said that UMKC will reserve a seat in its schools of law and dentistry for qualified entering freshmen at UMSL. The UMSL students may complete their undergraduate education at UMSL or transfer to UMKC after the completion of 90 hours.

The applicants must meet requirements, which include being selected by both universities to enter the program.

UMKC will have a matching program which applies to the School of Optometry at UMSL.

Three UMSL Professors Bestowed UM Honors

Three UMSL faculty members were named Tuesday as "Curators' Professors." The announcement was made during the UM Board of Curators meeting on campus.

The three are James Neal Primm, professor of history; Jacob J. Leventhal, professor of physics; and Eugene P. Meehan, professor of political science.

Primm, 69, has taught in the UM system for 33 years, and has been at UMSL since 1965.

Primm is considered an authority on St. Louis history. His 1981 book, "Lion of the Valley," received both scholarly and popular approval.

Two years later he collaborated with Steven Rowan of the UMSL history department on a book, "Germans for a Free Missouri" which received favorable reviews from the national press.

Early in his career he wrote a highly acclaimed economic and frontier history, "Economic Policy in the Development of Western State." He has also written a two-volume textbook for undergraduates, "The American Experience."

The history department's nomination of Primm for the honor cited his accomplishments in "contributing significantly to the growth and development, not only of the UMSL history department but also of the campus and the university as a whole."

In the past five years, Primm has done extensive public speaking about St. Louis history, addressing numerous social, church and civic groups. He is frequently contacted for interviews.

He is active in the community through his membership on the

UM-St. Louis First Slate Faces Possible Setback

by Patricia M. Carr
news editor

The "UM-St. Louis First" slate of senate hopefuls including Steve Bratcher and Robbyn Stewart had a setback this week.

According to Bratcher, they found out last Friday, March 13, that a 2.0 GPA was required in order for a student to be eligible to run for the senate. Stewart does not have a 2.0 grade point average.

Ken Meyer SA president asked vice chancellor for student affairs Sandy MacLean for his opinion of the Senate bylaws which states, "Student members must have a cumulative GPA of 2.0 and must have made at least a 2.0 average or achieved a satisfactory standing for the semester prior to serving on the senate."

According to Bratcher, MacLean ruled that the 2.0 requirement applied across all colleges regardless of the individual definition of good standing in each college.

Stewart said, "I am more than happy to go by the bylaws of the Senate."

Donald Bowling, assistant dean of the evening college said if a student in the evening college fell below a 1.875 they were now longer on good standing with the college. He did point out that according to faculty rules a student must have a 2.0 in order to graduate with a degree. Stewart is technically an evening college student.

Bratcher and Stewart have been planning to run for the president and vice president of the student association, respectively. These plans may also have to be altered.

According to SA campaign regulations, candidates for the positions of president and vice president must be in "good academic standing (an accumulative GPA of 2.000 and above and not on disciplinary probation.)"

Meyer said he found this to be ambiguous, since different colleges within the university have varying requirements for "good academic standing." He also said "Until I read the policy today (Monday) I did not know there was a good standing requirement for the positions of president and vice president of the SA."

He added that he thought it was a good idea since the positions do take a great deal of time away from studying.

According to Stewart no one is really sure where the campaign regulations came from. She said the bylaws and the constitution of the

Discord Member Questions Recent SA Election

by Craig A. Martin
managing editor

Charges of questionable behavior by Student Association Assembly Chairperson Steve Bratcher were leveled recently by SA member Rob Dawes concerning the filling of three vacant positions on the SA Executive Committee.

"I don't think there was anything illegal done, but what was done raises some serious questions," Dawes said.

Dawes speaks of the filling of three seats on the SA Executive Committee at last month's regular SA meeting.

"No one knew that they (the assembly) were going to vote on these positions at the meeting. Nothing was mentioned at the Executive Committee meeting, and it looked like it was going to be a short, boring meeting," he said.

"The members of the assembly should have been informed of this fact before the meeting. If you're turning over that much of the committee, you need to let people know," Dawes said.

"We certainly didn't try to hide anything. It was all common knowledge," Bratcher said.

SA President Ken Meyer described the process.

"The situation was this: Robbyn Stewart resigned her position as Administrative Chair on the Executive committee because part of that job entails the counting of the ballots for student senators. Since she was a candidate for senate herself, she wished to avoid a possible conflict of interest," Meyer said. "But since she had been involved for so long in the committee, she wanted to stay active," he said.

It was then that Jackie Dilg, the social committee chair on the committee, resigned her position to attempt to fill the post vacated by Stewart. This left the social committee chair open and gave Stewart the chance to be elected to that seat effectively "switching" positions with Dilg.

"Both of them had to be elected to their respective seats, and had no better chance of getting elected than anyone else on the assembly," Meyer added.

The third post filled was the legislative affairs chair. The former chair, Kurt Franz, was removed after violating the SA constitution by accumulating excessive absences.

Bratcher explained the lack of formal notification of SA members.

"It has never been standard policy to send an agenda before a meeting. I do know however, that the legislative affairs position was discussed at length by the assembly at least one month prior to the election of the new chair," Bratcher said.

"Nothing was published to let assembly members know what was going to be done at the meeting, but assembly business tends to be pretty informal," he said.

"There are no requirements anywhere that I or anyone else send an agenda before the meeting," Bratcher said.

"I just think that the election of these people could have waited until the next meeting and their responsibilities could have been assumed by other, maybe even more appropriate, committees," Dawes said.

"A delay like that could kill us," Meyer said. "We needed to get those positions filled as quickly as possible, because we have a lot of work to do."

Dawes also raised what he termed "integrity questions" concerning the relationships between Meyer and Bratcher and two of the elected chairs.

"It looks as though they already had their minds made up," he said.

"I'm not questioning Ken Meyer's integrity. I'm seriously questioning Steve Bratcher's. I think he failed to do his job effectively by not informing as many people as possible about the elections at the upcoming meeting," Dawes said.

"As an elected representative, you make a commitment to the student body to serve on the assembly. Whether or not you think the meeting will be boring or not should have absolutely no bearing on whether or not you decide to attend, Bratcher said.

Five-Year Plan Brings Focus

The University of Missouri-St. Louis is embarking on a challenging five-year journey. This journey was outlined last week when the Chancellor announced a comprehensive $17 million five-year plan for the campus. The plan is comprised of the Chancellor's Partnerships for Progress Program and has an added feature that focuses on campus support services. As the University enters a structurally transformed 21st century economy, it must be able to prepare students for a new world of learning. This plan highlights new programs, the possibility of a new optometry clinic in East St. Louis and the expansion of the University's Continuing Education Program. The plan was constructed through the Office of Budgeting, Planning and Institutional Research under the direction of E. Terrence Jones. The plan will be updated and revised on a yearly basis to coordinate with the University of Missouri's Long Range Plan and this campus' budget request for state funding. It is wise that the administration has learned that programs, no matter how good they are, do not sell themselves up in Jefferson City. The five-year plan "packages the campus" to a lay group of legislators. Let's hope it sells. If not, the state, the St. Louis region and the students this campus serves will lose.

Senate Elections Poorly Handled

Elections were held this week for student members of the campus senate. However, most students were not aware of this due to the poor timing of the elections and the lack of publicity generated about the various candidates. Since the filing deadline for the 25 student senate seats was Friday, March 13, and the elections were this week, March 18 and 19, this newspaper was unable to accurately cover the proceedings. It is not this publication's intention to say the campus should revolve around its printing schedule. However, due to the bad timing of the filing deadline and election dates, the Current was unable to present the candidates to the campus community so that an informed student electorate could make decisions at the polling places. Apathy is bad enough on this campus without adding to it. Furthermore, even those senators who do make it to the campus senate often don't take advantage of their roles. This year's student senator attendance rate is very low. Student senators can hold leadership roles that can shape University policy. Let's hope a lesson in election organization has been learned and that the upcoming Student Association elections will be better managed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Who Says UMC Is Best?

Dear Editor:

As a student who has attend UMSL and is now attending the University of Missouri-Columbia, I want to comment on student protests against UM investment in South Africa.

I am sure many of you have heard that about 500 people participated in a rally in front of Jesse Hall one day.

Why did so many people show up for a rally one day, when it usually seems that most students on the Columbia campus could care less about South Africa?

Well, most of the people in the crowd wanted to see police haul the protesters off to jail again.

At UMSL, when a rally was held to build a shanty to replace a shanty that was burned down, about 200 people attended. It was an active protest. No one helped the protesters at the Columbia chapter whenever somebody knocked down one of their shanties. As Jean Paul Sartre would say, intentions are nothing. Action counts. Whenever someone bothers to show up at one of the rallies here in Columbia, it's a passive activity.

That's one of the reasons I have to laugh when someone calls UMSL inferior to Columbia. I've been here almost one year and I'm quite dissatisfied with what I've seen on this campus. That's why I'm coming back to UMSL.

Sincerely,
John Tucci

Candidate Overlooked

Dear Editor:

It has come to my attention that a write-in candidate for the University

Senate was overlooked and not placed on the senate when a resignation occurred. The election took place one year ago.

I apologize for the oversight and offer a few suggestions to future students who find themselves in similar situations.

First, make sure your application is filled out completely and returned to the Student Association office (262 University Center) by the announced deadline.

Second, senate election results will be posted following the elections in the Student Association offices. If your name was not on the official election ballots, but you received votes as a write-in candidate, contact the office and make sure that your name and student number are listed correctly.

Third, new student elections are held in September, contact the SA office to inquire about your possible position and committee assignments for the new academic year.

If you want to be involved with the University Senate, the Student Association welcomes and encourages your efforts and participation.

Student senators can act as chairpersons on important senate committees. Student senators also have a unique opportunity to interact with faculty and administrators outside the classroom.

The opportunity to form friendships exists in addition to the development of professional relationships and valuable work experience.

Sincerely,
Ken Meyer
SA President

Response To 'Greek' Letter

Dear Editor:

This letter is in regard to the previous week's letter-"Greek is not fair." Mr. Wolfe, since you refused to discuss this with me in person, I shall use your methods.

The theme for the 1987 Greek Week was "United We Stand." It was not erroneous nor a falsehood nor a lie; it was a theme. The Greeks set this as their goal and their statement to the rest of campus for their project.

It seems that the main person "disfranchised," and I question his use of the word, was Mr. Wolfe. The Greeks allow all eligible students to participate in Greek Week—just as other campus events allow only eligible students to partake in activities. This eligibility for Greek Week rests in membership in an organization which itself belongs to Panhellenic Assoc. or the Interfraternity Council. Therefore what Mr. Wolfe seems to be protesting is his lack of membership in any such organization. People can complain and whine that they didn't get on SABC or Student Assoc or in an honorary organization or on varsity athletics. Usually certain requirements must be met first.

Membership in a Greek organization entails more than just one week's fun competition. Greeks work all year round on campus in scholarship and athletics and other organizations. We need to look at the history and founding of these organizations to better understand their members. Greek organizations were founded upon ideals of individuals banding together to better themselves in physical, social, and intellectual aspects. These organizations also have their noble, secret ideals.

Greek Week is the Greek systems call to the rest of campus for recognition, just as the disabled student organization has a week for recognition. This is the time when Greeks celebrate their membership in an organization which is very dear to them. They compete in various fun and serious events to get closer to each other from increased contact. The goal of Greek Week is not to unite all of campus—a rather impossible task or so it would seem. The goal is to unite the Greek system.

This campus doesn't recognize those Greeks that are in 3-4 other organizations plus their Greek affiliation, the Greeks on honor roll consistently, the Greeks in student government, or the Greeks in the athletic department. Students have the opportunities to participate in competitions in the intramural department all year long.

Mr. Wolfe, take the time and the effort to see what you can do—for example an UMSL olympics or intramural swim meet or school spirit project—but don't shoot down a project of another organization whose purposes you don't seem to comprehend.

If you are interested in membership in a Greek organization, contact the Student Activities office on campus for more information. There have been and will continue to be advertisements, as in this paper, with information pertaining to Greek organizations and membership.

One final note, Mr. Wolfe the Greeks are definitely not afraid of competition, for this week would not exist in this form if they were. They show this lack of fear in their willingness to put up intramural teams year long.

Sincerely,
Kevin Hupp

In Defense Of BiState

Dear Editor:

I am writing the paper in regard to the column, "Trust Me," March 5 issue. I believe Miss Richardson does the city bus system a wrong when she refers to "no spitting" signs and derogatory remarks about the driver and smells on the bus.

I have been riding the bus to school four days a week since August-Kingshighway and Natural Bridge routes. I have always been treated respectfully; I have seen no spitting or noticed offensive odors.

I speak for those of us who cannot afford cars, or are too elderly to drive—we are grateful for Bi-State transit service.

Sincerely,
Sabina M. Gillespie

The "McEmmerBusch" Wing Comes To UMSL

INSIDE SCOOP

by Steven L. Brawley
editor

Civic Progress has really sat up and taken notice of the University of Missouri-St. Louis lately. Or, is it that the University has taken notice of Civic Progress?

The recent donation of funds to the campus by McDonnell Douglas, Monsanto, AT&T, Emerson Electric and Anheuser Busch has brought a lot of positive attention to UMSL.

Together, these corporations' gifts total nearly $2 million.

Before last fall, the largest cash gift given to the campus had been $30,000.

UMSL has come a long way, thanks to the work done on both sides of the higher education funding scene.

In a state not known for its support of higher education, private funding had become increasingly important. Former Chancellor Grobman acknowledged this by establishing the University Relations division of the UMSL administrative structure.

Chancellor Barnett has taken the fundraising ball and run with it using the new and positive attention placed upon the campus since her arrival last June.

Having only being on the job for two days last year, the Governor said, "Marguerite, raise $1.2 million on your own and I will fund the rest of the money for the addition to the Thomas Jefferson Library."

Some honeymoon she had. But, she more than met his challenge. McDonnell Douglas, Busch and Emerson came to the rescue and put Barnett on the winning end of the Governor's funding game.

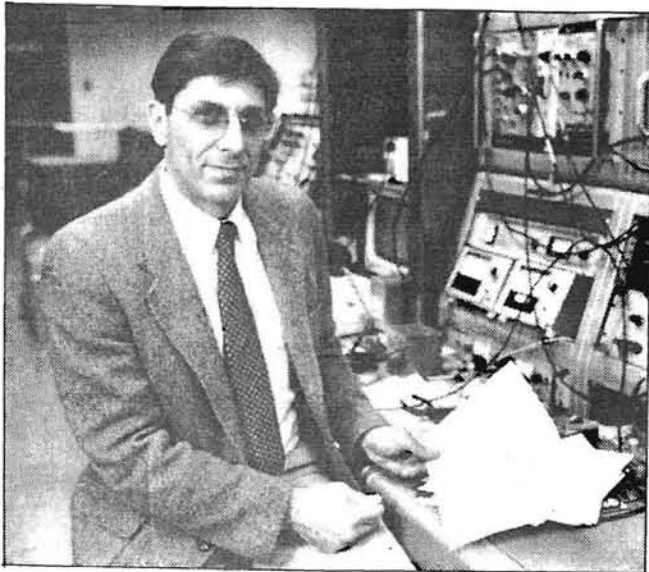

Now, the big question is what to call the new library addition.

The Chancellor has advocated naming it after the three corporations who donated the funds. However the McDonnell Douglas-Emerson Electric-Anheuser-Busch-Library Wing is a mouthful.

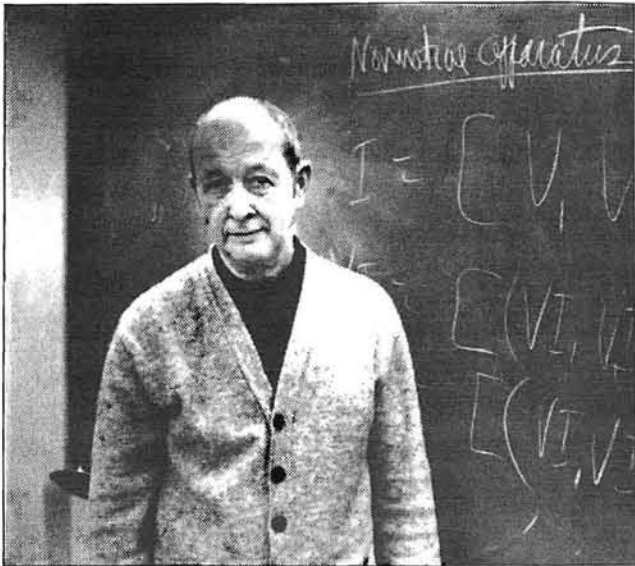

Why not call it "McEmmerBusch" instead. Realistically however, the Chancellor received a note during the Curator's meeting which suggested it be called the "Corporate Wing."

I knew my idea had gone over well when she winked at me later and said, "Good idea, kid"

Barnett said four or five students will be admitted to the program in 1987, and the full number of students in the program, 15 or 20, will be admitted in 1988.

The Board of Curators was also updated on plans for the University of Missouri's research park in St. Charles County, student teaching assistant programs, the search for a new UMC chancellor, student assessment programs, movement of some administrative services to the campus level, status of the 1987-88 budget request and campus educational programs dealing with AIDS.

boards of the Missouri Historical Society and the St. Louis Landmarks Association.

Between his 11 years of service to the UMC campus and his coming to UMSL, Primm spent seven years at Hiram College in Hiram, Ohio. He served as its president during 1964-65.

Leventhal, 49, has taught at UMSL since 1968.

Leventhal has made outstanding contributions to the understanding of the structure of atoms and simple molecules and their interactions with each other. In recent years he has performed some notable experiments with lasers.

The statement from the physics department nominating him said that he "has maintained his position at the cutting edge of research in atomic physics through a unique combination of foresight, innovation, talent in experimental design, and perseverance."

Leventhal's expertise has allowed him to receive a total of more than $1 million in grants from organizations such as the National Science Foundation and the department of Energy, among others.

His status in the international science community has also helped attract numerous undergraduate and graduate students to UMSL. Many of these students have co-written scholarly research papers with him and benefitted from his personal instruction.

Leventhal's eminence as a researcher was acknowledged by his receiving the President's Research award in 1982.

Leventhal has also been active in the campus community. He has served as a chairman of the UMSL physics department. Recently he served on the UM president's special committee on research.

Leventhal earned his B.S. in physics from Washington University and his Ph.D. in physics from the University of Florida.

Meehan, 63, has taught at UMSL since 1970.

Meehan's long list of publications has made a profound contribution to the growth of the field of political science. Other professionals in the field consider Meehan as one of the political science discipline's giants, according to the nominating statement from the UMSL political science department.

"Meehan's work...provides the foundation for improved understanding and can serve as a vehicle for improving the human condition," according to the nominating statement. His first book, "The British Left Wing and Foreign Policy," written in 1960, is still considered one of the finest studies of the role of ideology on foreign policy making in parliamentary democracies. He has gone on to write 18 other books and numerous articles.

Meehan's accomplishments are far-ranging. He has assisted elementary teachers and students in the Normandy School District, yet his work on critical thinking has influenced curriculum at the University of Costa Rica. He has served as a consultant for correspondence education for the U.S. Armed Forces Institute, a consultant for the Illinois Association of Redevelopment Authorities and as director of the Metropolitan Data Center of the St. Louis Housing Authority.

Last year he was a visiting scholar at the Netherlands Institute for Advanced Study in Wassenaar, the Netherlands.

Meehan's Curator's Professorship is expected to strengthen a new doctoral program in the political science department.

Meehan received his B.A. and M.A. in political science from Ohio State University and his Ph.D. in political science from the University of London.

Robert W. Murray, professor of chemistry, is the only other UMSL faculty member to have received the honor. He was named a Curator's Professor in 1981.

Throwing it up won't get it out of your system.

In the beginning, binging and purging seemed like an easy way to control your weight. Now, it's controlling your whole life. Because bulimia isn't a miracle diet. It's a dangerous disease. A potentially fatal obsession that consumes your mind while it destroys your body. And no matter how many times you tell yourself you can stop, that this time is the last time, the truth is: you can't quit alone. But there is a place where you're not alone. The Eating Disorders Program. Our medical staff and counselors have helped hundreds of women suffering from bulimia, so we know what you're going through. And we can help you end your physical and mental pain through a confidential, medically supervised inpatient program. If you or someone you love has a problem with bulimia, anorexia or overeating, call the Eating Disorders Program. Because throwing up all that food you're consuming won't help. ## PLAN

The Partnership Program was developed by Barnett last summer and is presently before the state legislature for funding in the University's 1987-88 state budget request.

The Partnership Plan looks at ways to prepare high school students for college, to enhance science and technology programs available to area citizens and to establish collaborative efforts with area business and industry.

The five year plan adds a fourth emphasis area of support services.

"Project Support will strengthen the other three Partnership Programs by providing support services for libraries, computing, scholarships and fundraising efforts.

"These support services have never been adequately funded," Barnett said.

Under the new plan, the University would add a branch of Continuing Education courses, an optometry clinic in East St. Louis, degree offerings in nearly two dozen areas and stronger links with area school districts.

"In order to ensure its own prosperity, in order to continue to contribute to Missouri's economic transformation, and in order to participate in the United States' regaining worldwide economic leadership, St. Louis must work harder by working smarter," Barnett said.

BALLOT

SA are the binding regulations.

Stewart said, "At this time there is an investigation to find out who was involved in writing the document."

Meyer took the case before the student court on Monday to clarify the ambiguities of the current campaign regulations. Only three of the seven student court justices were present Monday to hear Meyer's case.

Adrian Cornelius and Corliss Burton, two justices hearing the case are included on Bratcher and Stewart's proposed slate of candidates for the SA elections.

Cornelius said, "There is a very big conflict of interest."

Stewart does not agree that there will be a conflict. "Basically I didn't recruit these people. They don't know me personally. I've met them once."

The third member present at the Monday hearing was Alind Gadkari. According to Cornelius, Gadkari left the hearing after an early decision was reached.

Cornelius said the first decision reached by the court would not allow Stewart to run. He added, "Bratcher talked with us after the decision was reached. He twisted our arms. We shouldn't have done it, but we changed the decision."

He said a second decision was made which would allow Stewart to run, and if elected become vice president. "But it wouldn't allow her to assume administrative duties until her grades from this semester were in," Cornelius said.

Finally, a third decision was reached to table the matter until an emergency meeting could be held.

Cornelius said, "We haven't arrived at a conclusive decision." He added that he thought they would rule according to the university's 2.0 graduation requirement.

Meyer said he refused to accept the court's decision since there were so few members present. Cornelius said another meeting should be held sometime Thursday.

Stewart said she is happy about another hearing when all seven justices will be present. "I'm happy we'll have a full court. This is not something routine, like a parking ticket."

Bratcher said, "We are hoping the court will rule favorably, we're not asking for the bending of any rules."

Musical Alumna Debuts At Maryville

by Christopher A. Duggan
associate features editor

The audience applauded enthusiastically as she stepped up to the piano bench. She turned to them and bowed deeply in acknowledgement. What came next was a spellbinding performance of works by Scarlatti, Beethoven, Liszt, Rachmaninoff, Debussy and Brahms.

Diane Mohr had good reason to be nervous, even though she said that she wasn't. After all, it was her professional debut.

This particular performance, at Maryville College's Huttig Chapel, was the result of Diane's winning an award presented by the Artist Presentation Society.

The Society, formed in 1947 judges the applicants for the award, which is presented annually, on their readiness to embark on a musical career.

The judges are professional musicians who judge by professional standards. An applicant must have the unanimous agreement of the judges, so it is possible for a winner not to be selected, or for there to be more than one winner, as was the case this year.

In addition to Diane, there were three other winners.

The recipients of the award are presented in public recital and receive a $350 award. Artists may be presented in additional concerts under the sponsorship of the Artist Presentation Society, although Diane is not sure exactly what the future has in store.

Diane began playing piano in first grade. While attending high school at Ritenour she studied at the Institute of Music in St. Louis for four years.

She came to UMSL and studied under Evelyn Mitchell. While at UMSL, she earned a Bachelor of Music Degree in music education and performance. She graduated summa cum laude and won the 1982 graduate achievement award.

"Feel that I owe a great deal to Evelyn," she said. "If it weren't for her, I would have floundered further down the road."

While at UMSL, she won a good many competitions which resulted in performances as soloist with the Jefferson City, Webster University and University City Orchestras.

After leaving St. Louis, she went to the University of Missouri—Kansas City, where she studied under Joanne Baker. There she earned her Master of Music degree in piano performance and worked as a graduate teaching assistant.

In addition to this, she performed in master classes with Emanuel Ax, Garrick Ohlsson and Paul Badura-Skoda. She has also performed with the Kansas City Symphony.

"My teachers have been great," she said, "but I believe that I owe everything to God. If it weren't for him, I wouldn't have found Evelyn, and I would not have been as successful."

Huttig Chapel, the location of her professional debut, is a fitting place to thank God for her achievements,

Cedric R. Anderson

MAESTRO: Diane Mohr, who graduated from UMSL with bachelor of Music degrees in music education and performance later attended UMKC, where she received her master of music in piano performance.

and one cannot argue that her performance was flawless.

"It was a performance that would have stood up in New York or anywhere," Mitchell said.

Diane appears to be able to handle pressure well. Indeed, she seemed more nervous during this interview than she did for the recital.

If the standing ovation at the end of her performance, which she bowed modestly in response to, is any indication of what the future has in store for Diane, then she will definitely have a lot more bowing to do.

Cosby Concert To Top Spring Break Billings

by Sue Fenster
music reviewer

What are you doing over spring break? Staying home with nowhere to go? You say you want to do something fun, exciting, and different, yet the bars aren't your style.

What about something that's sure to be a hit? On Sunday March 22, 7 p.m. at the Arena, Bill Cosby will be appearing. All of the seats are good, because his hilarious performance will be on a revolving stage.

His humor is far from typical. Although many comedians get cheap laughs from using words which I cannot print, or poking fun at members of the audience, Cosby centers his humor around everyday situations—funny things which we can all relate to. Tickets for Bill Cosby are $16.50 and $18.50.

If you're not too tired the next day, Huey Lewis and the News with special guest The Robert Cray Band will be appearing at the Arena March 23 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $16.50.

The Robert Cray Band is rock-n-roll blues, led by Robert Cray on guitar and vocals and joined by bass player Richard Cousins, keyboardist Peter Boe and drummer David Olson.

Their video, "Smokin' Gun" was a follow-up to their national network debut on The David Letterman Show on November 25, 1986.

Huey Lewis, who describes himself as "a nice guy," is joined by band members keyboardist Sean Hopper, guitarist Chris Hayes, guitarist-saxophonist Johnny Colla, bassist Mario Cipollina, and drummer Bill Gibson.

Since forming in 1980, the band has produced such hits as "Working for a Living," "Do You Believe in Love," and "Trouble in Paradise." This is before their first chartbusting album, "Sports" was released in late 1983.

"Heart and Soul," "Heart of Rock and Roll," "I Want a New Drug" and "If This Is It," all from the "Sports" album zoomed up the charts.

Following Lewis' cameo appearance in "Back to the Future" (He was a judge at the audition), as well as the hits "Power of Love" and "Back in Time," the long-awaited follow-up album "Fore!" was released.

Although "Fore!" has only been out since late 1986, it has already received airplay for "Hip to be Square" and "Jacob's Ladder."

But if you're not into the pop-rock scene, and prefer some good old-fashioned country-rock, The Ozark Mountain Daredevils will be appearing Saturday March 28, 7:30 p.m. at Westport Playhouse. Tickets are $14.00.

The Ozarks as a group are nearly ten years old, forming in Springfield in the early Seventies. As they enter the Eighties, the Ozarks have trimmed down to four founding members, teamed up with producer John Boylan, and signed a worldwide contract with CBS Records.

The members remaining are drummer Steve Canaday, bass player Supe Granda, harp player/vocalist Steve Cash, and vocalist/guitarist John Dillon.

On Thursday April 2, Stryper will play heavy metal with an evangelical attitude. Check out this band at the Kiel Opera House at 8 p.m. Tickets are $13.50.

Stryper's newest album, "To Hell With the Devil" says exactly what their music sounds like. It celebrates God instead of the devil and the negative influences in rock music. However, Christianity doesn't have to be the center of your life in order to enjoy their music.

Stryper sends a positive message and even the lyrics are universalizing and left to your own interpretation.

The band began its mission in 1984 with members Robert and Michael Sweet, Oz Fox and Timothy Gaines.

On April 3, at 8 p.m., Westport Playhouse welcomes Georgia Satellites, a southern rock band inspired by the likes of Chuck Berry and Charlie Daniels. Tickets are $13.50.

The Georgia Satellites hail from Atlanta, Georgia and formed in 1980. Their lineup consists of Dan Baird on guitar/vocals, Rick Richards on guitar/vocals, Rick Price on bass/vocals and Mauro Magallon on drums.

Georgia Satellites are currently receiving airplay for "Keep Your Hands to Yourself," a country southern-rock song, which sounds like it comes from below the Mason-Dixon line.

And if you want a rollicking good time, Rosanne Barr, America's favorite "Domestic Goddess" will be appearing at Westport Playhouse Saturday April 4. Tickets are $15.00.

Like Cosby, Barr is conspicuous in her absence of profanity but her routine centers around life experiences. In her case, cooking, cleaning, family/children. She has appeared on the Tonight Show at least three times, and is now in the middle of her cross-country tour.

What Else But Sun For Break?

TRUST ME

by Ann Richardson
associate features editor

My friend Dawnya is a wonderful person. She is thoughtful, considerate, caring, helpful, sharing and her parents live in Ft. Lauderdale. This last attribute makes me very happy to know her, since spring break is next week and my Ugly Teller card is limp from overuse.

Don't you think for one minute that I'm going for pleasure. I'm going for health reasons. My great, great, great, cousin three times removed was the Lizard-Man in P.T. Barnum's side show. I inherited some of his reptile chromosomes and consequently have a runny nose throughout the winter months and sit by the thermometer waiting for it to get high enough to test out the new flavor of Hawaiian Tropic (this summer's featured flavor: coconut mango delight).

For those of you who would like to escape St. Louis for warmer climates but don't have either the funds or a good friend who has palm trees in his or her backyard, don't worry. You'll be at work making money or just relaxing while I'm getting carsick trying to read the Shakespeare assignment due the day I get back. You can really laugh it up when I come back peeling like a snake shedding its skin.

Better yet, monsoon season will start the day I arrive and it will be sunny and warm with highs in the mid to upper 90s here, thanks to a weather miracle Bob Richards will pull off just after I hit the state border.

If you aren't going to Florida/Texas/California, don't despair. You could road trip to someplace closer. I traditionally go to Chicago for a few days during spring break. If Ferris Bueller had a good time there, why can't you? There's always something going on there, and although you might not lead a parade in a rendition of "Twist and Shout," you could go to a dance club and witness some guy walking around with a Butterball turkey on his head or another man dancing with a boa constrictor wrapped around him (both of which I have actually witnessed).

You could stay here and still have a good time. Go to the zoo and see the penguins, go to a hockey game, take your honey out for dinner. I would almost rather stay here than be with thousands of sweaty, drunken strangers who grab your butt as you pass by them, spill beer on you and throw up on your favorite shirt.

The key word in the above sentence, by the way, is "almost."

'Goddess' Exposes Every Flaw Of Monroe

by Loren Richard Klahs book reviewer

Goddess: The Secret Lives of Marilyn Monroe
by Anthony Summers
Macmillan Publishing Company,
$18.95, 415 pages

The final photograph of Marilyn Monroe isn't a photograph of her at all. Instead, an unretouched picture of "Marilyn in death" is offered to the reader. The candid black and white glossy features a police file number. We are told that the snapshot was taken "just moments after autopsy." The implication is, of course that had she known, Marilyn would roll over in her grave. "Before the procedure (autopsy), say those present, the lifeless Marilyn remained beautiful."

Unlike those nameless observers, author Anthony Summers has chosen not to allow Marilyn to remain beautiful. His best-selling book, "Goddess: The Secret Lives of Marilyn Monroe" (MacMillan) is yet another attempt to expose every wrinkle under the cosmetically altered face of one of modern history's most famous stars.

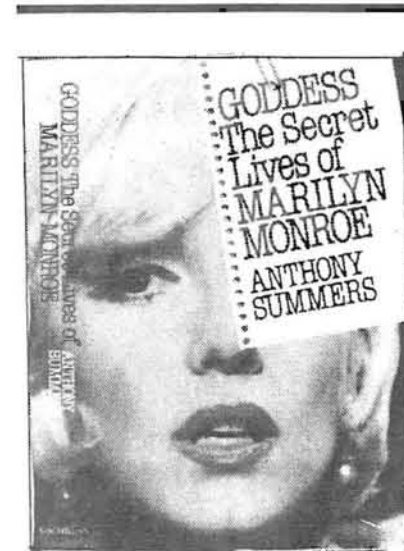

Even after a quarter century, the ghost of Monroe has not been allowed to rest in peace. Far from it. It seems that her death has only added to the mystique.

If alive today, Marilyn Monroe would be sixty.

In death, Marilyn Monroe is (and forever will be) a fantasy/dream/legend.

"Goddess: The Secret Lives of Marilyn Monroe" is the latest attempt to cash in on the "Candle in the Wind" and expose even more dirty linen.

In the final sentence of the final chapter, Anthony Summers declares that "Everyman has made her a goddess."

Immediately preceding that grandiose observation, the author exposes an "odd telegram" in which Monroe described herself to Robert Kennedy as "one of the few remaining earth-bound stars."

To say that the saga of Monroe resembles that of a freak show would not be totally inaccurate. After reading Summers' book, it becomes readily apparent that the persona of Monroe revolved around a three-ring circus composed of vultures, prey and (of course) audience.

Naturally, the author (in spite of his "deep admiration" or "love" or "worship" or "whatever" for Marilyn Monroe) is more than ready to "tell all."

Inquiring minds have that right, or so I am told.

But wait a minute! Haven't we heard all of this garbage before? Isn't twenty-five years of gossip kind of, well, frankly BORING?

After reading "Goddess: The Secret Lives of Marilyn Monroe," I can honestly say that I never intend to put myself through such down and out drudgery again. This is the type of book that belongs in the waiting rooms of cosmetologists.

Does anybody out there really care that Monroe had a brief but passionate affair with Marlon Brando in 1955? Is it still interesting that Marilyn's marriage to Joe DiMaggio lasted "but for a brief nine months"? Can anyone still be truly shocked over the revelation that Marilyn had "relationships" with both "Jack and Bobby Kennedy"?

To read this book is to find a bunch of old scrapbooks and to look through them yet one more time.

This time around the pages are

'Outrageous Fortune': A First In Female Buddy Films

by Nick Pacino movie reviewer

The male buddy film has been a staple of Hollywood in numerous dramatic and comedic combinations (Hope and Crosby, Redford and Newman) going back many years and proliferating today ad nauseum.

Unfortunately, similar vehicles have not been available for actresses, simply because the idea of depicting two independent women teaming up for anything beyond a Tupperware Party has struck fear in the hearts of hypo critical Hollywood producers.

Only television can claim a breakthrough with the great team of Lucy Ricardo and Ethel Mertz. But that duo was still closely tied to hearth, home and husbands.

Now the "almost anything goes" atmosphere of today's film colony has opened the door of possibilities for using female stars in more multi-dimensional roles. And through that door has walked Bette Midler—a tough dame whose floozy exterior, rapier tongue and irreverent wit have made her a perfect top banana in recent hits like "Ruthless People" and now in her new pairing with demure Shelly Long in Arthur Hiller's "Outrageous Fortune," hyped as the first female buddy film.

Midler essentially plays herself (or the carefully packaged self she has been hamming up since her days at New York's Continental Baths) as the character Sandy Brozinski, an aspiring thespian and New Wave waitress. She's had her share of hard knocks and has learned the chutzpah is the greater part of valor.

She looks down on "wimps" like Lauren Ames (Long), who have never had to lift a finger for anything without mommy and daddy providing the winch. She doesn't know the Bard from Burma Shave, even though her resume includes "Ninja Vixens" in her credits.

The girls begin a caustic relationship when both attend famed acting coach Stanislov Korzenowski's (Robert Prosky) clinic—Lauren on a $6,000 loan from parents who have already sunk $32,000 on her acting lessons; Sandy on a questionable scholarship.

Things get a bit more bitchy when they discover both have been dallied with and duped by the same dope—Michael (Peter Coyote) by name—who turns out to be a shifty double agent with a diabolical scheme to blackmail the world's governments with a vile little vial of de-foliant, two drops of which can wipe out vegetation on the scale of California.

The girls only discover Michael's true identity, and their own strong friendship and loyalty, after some clever cross-country detective work that involves some hilarious bits of schtick that start in the N.Y. City morgue with the girls rejecting a corpse as Michael on the basis of the size of a particular body part, and end with them as undercover customers in a dusty New Mexico brothel.

Long really shines during those moments when her character Lauren must draw on her acting lesson in tight spot—becoming a gutsier, more interesting person than the basically dull Lauren whose frantic exasperation with Sandy and cute coping with the rest of the world reminded this viewer of some of Terri Garr's characterizations.

Greek Week A Success

Greek Week, which ended last Saturday, proved to the UM-St. Louis campus that all the Greeks are winners. There were various serious and fun games throughout the week in the spirit of friendly competition.

The theme of this year's Greek Week was "United We Stand." Signs, which had been designed to depict the theme, were put up outside the University Center. The Sigma Pi's won best sign for the fraternities; Zeta Tau Alpha won for the sororities.

Greek Week kicked off on March 8 with a sing and talent competition. Each sorority and fraternity presented a 20-minute scene or summary of a Broadway musical. The winners were Delta Zeta sorority for "Oklahoma" and to Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity for "Cats."

The talent competition showed other Greeks what individual talents each sorority/fraternity has. The Sigma Tau Gammas won the fraternity division. They formed a band and sang their version of Club Nouveau's "Lean on Me." Zeta Tau Alpha took first place with a short skit and dance to "Jungle Love," which was choreographed by members Carolyn Basile and Marla Estrada.

In the sorority events, Zeta Tau Alpha floated into first place for tubing; Alpha Xi Delta skipped over the others to win backgammon; Zeta Tau Alpha knocked over their competition to win bowling; and the Delta Zetas pedaled hard and won the trike race.

Alpha Xi Delta hurled into first place for softball throw; and Zeta Tau Alpha clinched another victory for the three-legged race.

For the fraternity events, the Sigma Pi's shot into first place for darts and ran their way to a victory in the marathon. Powerlifting was won by the Sigma Tau Gammas; and Pi Kappa Alpha rode their way into first place in the chariot race.

In other games, Alpha Xi Delta and Sigma Tau Gamma won billiards as well as ping-pong. The Delta Zetas and Sigma Tau Gammas shot into first with foosball. Zeta Tau Alpha and Pi Kappa Alpha won trivia. The Zeta ladies also won the four-person swim relay as did the Sigma Tau Gamma fraternity.

The Delta Zeta sorority won the next four events: relay race; keg toss; Volkswagen push; and Tug-of-War. In the fraternity division, Pi Kappa Alpha won the relay and the Volkswagen push as well as Tug-of-War. The Sigma Tau Gammas pulled out a victory in the keg toss.

Greek God competition is for the most athletic member of each fraternity. Men must run a half-mile, swim 50 yards, and go through an obstacle course. This year's winner was Chip Dunman of Sigma Tau Gamma.

Greek Goddess contestants must run a half-mile, swim 25 yards and go through the same obstacle course. For the second year in a row, Nancy Sedej of Zeta Tau Alpha clinched the victory.

Princess Athena, the girl most popular with the fraternities, was Lias Neiuro of Delta Zeta, and Greek Physique, which is self-explanatory, was won by Gaspare Calvaruso of Pi Kappa Alpha.

Congratulations go to Jerry Uhlenrop of Pi Kappa Alpha and to Patti Seipp of Zeta Tau Alpha on being chosen Man and Woman of the Year respectively. This award is given to the member who does the most within the Greek system as well as around campus and in the community.

Brent Wetzler of Pi Kappa Alpha became this year's Greek scholar, the person who has the highest grade point average in the Greek system.

Overall, the big winners were Sigma Tau Gamma fraternity and Zeta Tau Alpha sorority, who won the most events and became Greek Week champions.

In other music news, Elektra recording artist Howard Jones was recently honored as "Best Keyboardist" by the readers of Rolling Stone Magazine in their 1986 Critics'/Reader's Poll. ## Rivermen Strong On Experience And Pitching

The pitching staff is the key to any team's success, according to UMSL baseball coach Jim Brady. If that is the case, then the Rivermen should pile up some numbers this season.

"This year we have more depth on the mound than ever before," said Brady, who is in his second year as the UMSL head coach.

The Rivermen will combine old and new faces on the mound this year. Back from last year are pitchers Tom Lewis, Kevin Blanton, Ken Eckardt and John Markham. Lewis was a first team All-MIAA selection last year and posted a 6-3 with two saves and a 2.84 earned run average. Blanton was named as an honorable mention All-MIAA team and had a record of 4-3. Eckardt, who is only a sophomore, was 2-0 and had a 3.30 ERA.

Bob Simpson, who was a first team All-MIAA pick in 1985, will return as a key man out of the bullpen, along with Ken Allman.

Newcomers who will also see action on the mound are Bob Finder, Mike Melton, Bill Cunningham, Rick Etling, Brad Moore and Paul Niggemeier.

Brady returns a strong nucleus from last year's team, which finished with a 24-17 record and won the MIAA South Division title.

Heading the list of returning players are Russell Muenks and Tony Leasck.

Muenks, an All-South Central Region pick last year, hit .360 and led the team with 27 walks.

Muenks will be the starting second baseman this year, but will also see action in the outfield. Moving from the outfield to second base has not been a problem for Muenks.

"He played there some last year and did a good job," Brady said. "Because we got him in early to work on the combination with King, he is in good shape."

Leasck, a first team All-MIAA player, hit .380, stole 19 bases and had 22 RBIs. Leasck will again be the rightfielder.

Greg King will make his return to the lineup after missing two-thirds of the 1986 season with a broken wrist. King will move from second base to shortstop this season. He has had no trouble making the adjustment, according to Brady.

"He's done everything I've expected him to do," Brady said. "We may even be stronger defensively."

The Rivermen lost a key player in catcher John Murphy, but Brady said that Ron Hoerner and Chris Johnson should be able to fill the void left by Murphy.

"Chris Johnson is an excellent defensive catcher," Brady said, "and he has great leadership abilities. Hoerner's going to be in the lineup (catching or playing first base). He's got a mighty potent bat, and he drives in runs. Who plays will depend on what I think we need that day."

Gary Schwartz returns as a designated hitter and first baseman. He hit .322 with four home runs and 25 RBIs.

Joe Kuster and John Stevenson will share the centerfield duties this season. Kuster hit .270 last year while Stevenson hit .266.

The new members of the club have blended with the established players, Brady said.

"They have contributed immediately and that is all it takes," he said. "The competition they've provided has made the guys work harder."

Dan Kiely, a transfer from Florissant Valley, is expected to be the starting left fielder this year. He hit .350 and drove in 63 RBIs for the Norsemen last year.

Two junior college transfers will share the duties at third base. Pete Jans, from Jefferson Junior College, and Ken Kleeschulte, from East Central Junior College, will platoon at the hot corner.

Jerry Norton, who played with Kleeschulte at East Central, will play second base when Muenks move to the outfield.

The Rivermen are off to a 3-2 start and will face a very tough schedule in the upcoming weeks. They will face nine Division I opponents, including Missouri, Arkansas, St. Louis University and SIU-Carbondale.

They will also play four Division II schools who are ranked in Collegiate Baseball's preseason poll. Eckardt (ranked No. 12), SIU-Edwardsville (No. 16), Kentucky Wesleyan (No. 28) and Southeast Missouri (No. 30) will give the Rivermen some stiff competition this year. Brady favors the difficult schedule.

"The only way to get better is to play a tough schedule," he said. "If you are playing quality competition and you put some numbers on the board, then you've got something to stick your chest out about and be proud of."

Riverwomen Show Confidence As Season Begins

Experience and knowledge are the two main ingredients for an improved and more confident Riverwomen softball squad in 1987.

In 1986, coach Lisa Studnicki began her first season as a head coach with 13 new faces on the team roster. This year she has seven starters returning to the diamond.

Looking at her team from a player's standpoint, Studnicki believes that confidence won't be a problem this season.

"I think that they have more confidence in each other this year because they know one another better," Studnicki said. "And coming off a good year, it's going to help their confidence a lot."

"From a coaching standpoint, since the majority of the team is coming back, I know what each one can and can't do. I can be more aggressive this year as a coach, and I will be more confident because they are more experienced."

Last season Studnicki led the Riverwomen to an impressive 27-17 record after the team posted a 13-20 mark in 1985. In her second year as a head coach, Studnicki continues to strive for improvement.

"We're going to stick to the basics, but we're going to be smarter," she said. "We are going to do the little things better this year."

With juniors Grace Gain and Laurie Aldy and sophomore Linda Rogoz returning, opposing pitchers will be facing a tough Riverwomen lineup.

Returning to her spot at first base, Gain was a first team All-MIAA selection last season as she hit .305 and drove in 16 RBIs.

Shortstop Laurie Aldy, catalyst of the UMSL offensive attack, hit a blistering .355 while scoring a school record 51 runs. Aldy, who also had a record six triples in 1986, was named to the MIAA second team.

"She's a captain this year, and the team looks not only at her capabilities but at her leadership," Studnicki said. "She's an outstanding ballplayer, and she will have a good year."

After leading the 1986 UMSL squad with 23 RBIs, Rogoz will return to start at third while also sharing the duties behind the plate with sophomore Melanie Wynn.

Wynn, who hit .378, showed her versatility last year as she started 19 games at catcher, 19 games in leftfield and six games in centerfield.

Included on the list of newcomers expected to make a big impact this season is Riverwoman basketball star Kris Wilmesher. The sophomore, who averaged 15 points a game on the basketball court, will see starting time in centerfield and at second base.

When looking at her offensive attack, Studnicki sees a solid lineup.

"At the beginning of an inning," she said, "no matter which three are coming up, I feel confident that we will get some hits."

The Riverwomen feature a stronger and deeper pitching staff this season with record setting hurler Lucy Gassei returning for her final season.

Gassei, a three year starter, already holds the school record for most wins in a season, 14 last year; most career wins, 30; most career strikeouts, 146; and most career shutouts, 15.

Last year the Riverwomen had only two pitchers, but this year Studnicki will be able to relieve some of the pressure from Gassei with freshman recruits Sandy Hammonds and Carrie Syberg.

Former UMSL pitcher Lisa Thayer will make the transition from player to coach this season as she will assist Studnicki.

The Riverwomen have jumped out to a good start in 1987 as the softball team has compiled a 4-1 record after winning its first four games. Studnicki is happy with the impressive start, but is also relieved to have the first loss out of the way.

"I'm pleased that we've gotten off to such a good start," she said. "It isn't too often that a team goes undefeated during a season, and a loss early like this brings us back to reality and shows us that we aren't untouchable."

The Riverwomen will play their next 10 games in the warm air of Orlando, Fla. Studnicki is not taking the trip lightly.

"There's going to be some tough competition down there," she said. "It's going to be an endurance test. I hope that we come out of it with a good record and without injuries."

UMSL's next home game will be March 30 against Missouri Baptist. Game time is scheduled for 2:30 p.m.
